Making History: The 74th Annual Artists & Writers Charity Softball Game in East Hampton

The 74th annual Artists & Writers Charity Softball Game took place in Herrick Park in East Hampton on August 20 and was a game for the history books as the Writers rallied in the bottom of the 9th inning to score 17 runs to beat the Artists, 19-18. President Bill Clinton umpired from the mound, and Rabbi Josh Franklin of the Jewish Center of the Hamptons scored the winning run with a clutch double with two outs and the bases loaded, earning him the MVP award. All proceeds from the game supported East End charities: The Eleanor Whitmore Early Childhood Center, Phoenix House Academy, The Retreat and East End Hospice. For more details about the amazing game, read Dan Rattiner's account on page 150.

Dan's Papers Takes to the Airwaves on WABC Radio

Dan's Papers readers will have a new way to get the latest information from their favorite publication thanks to WABC Long Island broadcasting "Out & About in The Hamptons" segments which started Monday, August 22.

Victoria Schneps, founder of Dan's Papers parent company Schneps Media, will be the voice of Out & About in The Hamptons on 107.1 WLIR-FM every Monday from 8-8:30 p.m. Listeners will be able to hear the two-part segment at the start of "Breaking It Down" with Frank MacKay.

"Having Vicki Schneps on our show to tell us what's happening in the Hamptons is like having Tom Brady on a sports show speaking about what's happening in the NFL," said Frank MacKay, president of WABC Radio Long Island Division.

MacKay has been a longtime fixture on television and radio. Throughout his award-winning career, MacKay has conducted more than 5,000 interviews with high-profile individuals, ranging from professional athletes and celebrities to Presidents of the United States, Speakers of the House and Senate Majority Leaders.

"Dan's Papers is the 'go-to' for knowing what's happening on the East End — both the North and South Forks — and we're delighted to share it with WABC radio listeners," Schneps said.

Dan's Papers is the largest weekly publication covering all the things to do and places to go on the East End. Schneps Media is the parent company of more than 80 publications across New York City, Long Island, Westchester County, Philadelphia and Palm Beach.

East Hampton's $33 Million Affordable Housing Project Begins

BY TAYLOR K. VECSEY

Officials from across New York State gathered August 17 to celebrate the groundbreaking of a highly-anticipated $33 million affordable housing development off Three Mile Harbor Road in East Hampton.

Situated on a 14-acre currently vacant parcel, the completed development will offer five two-story buildings featuring 50 energy-efficient apartments with one-, two- and three-bedroom townhouse-style apartments, as well as a community space and outdoor recreation areas. They will be available for low- and moderate-income households, offering affordable family homes within the East Hampton School District.

Three Mile Harbor, as the complex is called, was developed by Georgica Green Ventures and the East Hampton Housing Authority, as part of Gov. Kathy Hochul's initiative to make housing more affordable, equitable and stable, according to a statement.

"My administration remains steadfast in our commitment to creating affordable housing for all New Yorkers that is high-quality and sustainable," said the governor, who was not in attendance but touted the ceremonial beginning of the project.

Construction is expected to take 18 months.

"Three Mile Harbor will create 50 new, energy-efficient homes and provide opportunities for working families in East Hampton and strengthen the community through much-needed housing," she said. "We will continue taking bold action to help ensure all New Yorkers have a more stable and equitable future for the next generation, and developments like Three Mile Harbor bring us closer to this goal."

In the 2023 State Budget, Hochul secured a new $25 billion, five-year, comprehensive housing plan that will increase housing supply by creating or preserving 100,000 affordable homes across the state. The figure includes 10,000 with support services for vulnerable populations, plus the electrification of an additional 50,000 homes.

State financing for Three Mile Harbor includes Low-Income Housing Tax Credits that will generate $18 million in equity, $3.4 million from New York State Homes and Community Renewal's Housing Trust Fund, and $350,000 from the Federal Housing Trust Fund. Suffolk County has provided $2.2 million in subsidies.

As for East Hampton's latest affordable housing complex at 290 Three Mile Harbor Road, there will be 10 one-bedroom, 29 two-bedroom and 10 three-bedroom apartments. A one-bedroom apartment will house the development's superintendent.

Five of the units will be accessible for people with mobility impairments and three of the units will be equipped for persons with hearing and/or visual impairments.

A community building will include a meeting space, kitchenette, broadband Wi-Fi hotspot available to all residents, laundry facilities, and a generator in the event of power outages. Additional amenities include a playground and a community patio.

Those who earn at or below 60% of the area median income (AMI) are eligible for housing in the development. Eight of the apartments will be available to those at 30% of the AMI.

"I am pleased and excited to see this project, which will provide homes for 50 residents and their families, get underway," said East Hampton Town Supervisor Peter Van Scoyoc in a statement. "Safe, year-round housing that is accessible to our community members is crucial to insure a healthy diversity in East Hampton, and to maintain the fabric of our community."

"Three Mile Harbor will be a transformative project for the Town of East Hampton and we are excited to mark the start of construction with today's groundbreaking ceremony," said David Gallo, the president of Georgica Green Ventures LLC. "This project serves as a model for how state and local agencies, coupled with the private sector, can work together to address the need for affordable housing by undertaking a thoughtful approach that considers sustainability, transit access and community resources."

Homes and Community Renewal (HCR) Commissioner RuthAnne Visnauskas, who was on hand for the groundbreaking, thanked Georgica Green Ventures and the East Hampton Housing Authority.

"The development's sustainable, energy-efficient design and ample green space demonstrates our commitment to building new housing that leads to a cleaner, healthier environment for all," she said.

Over the last decade, HCR has invested over $200 million in Suffolk County for the creation or preservation of 1,853 affordable homes, including Gansett Meadows, also in East Hampton, which provides 37 homes for working families, and Riverview Lofts in the Town of Riverhead, where there are 116 affordable apartments and 12,000 square feet of commercial space in an environmentally sustainable building resilient to flooding and severe weather.

Assemblyman Fred W. Thiele Jr., who represents East Hampton, said the project helps address "the affordable housing crisis," but noted there is more work to do.

"This crisis has also exacerbated other East End issues such as traffic congestion and the recruitment and retention of fire and emergency service volunteers," he said. "This November, voters will have the opportunity to approve the Peconic Bay Community Housing Fund, which was signed by the Governor last October. Approval of this proposal will greatly expand additional housing options for local families."

Second Pedestrian Killed by LIRR Train in Southampton This Month

BY OLIVER PETERSON

A local man was struck and killed by a speeding Long Island Rail Road train in Southampton Village on Wednesday, August 17. It was the second fatal train incident in Southampton this month.

Police said the Southampton Town Police Department Emergency Dispatch Center received a call at approximately 3:43 p.m. on Wednesday reporting the incident, which occurred in the area of N. Bishop Lane and Moses Lane in Southampton. Several patrol units and detectives responded to the scene.

The eastbound train stopped approximately 200 feet east of the Moses Lane train crossing after hitting the male pedestrian, according to police who identified the victim as 57-year-old Southampton resident Rodney Brumsey who was deceased when officers arrived.

A preliminary investigation revealed that Brumsey was crossing the tracks near a wooded area and did not respond to a warning horn signaled by the engineer.

Unable to stop in time, the eastbound train fatally struck Brumsey, who according to his Facebook page graduated from Southampton High School and attended Mercy College.

MTA Police are conducting the ongoing investigation.

Brumsey was the second pedestrian to die after being hit by an LIRR train in Southampton this month.

At approximately 7 p.m. on Monday, August 1, 45-year-old Southampton resident Rafal Stoklosa was hit by an eastbound LIRR train west of Hills Station Road bridge in Shinnecock Hills.

Several patrol units and detectives responded to the scene and found Stoklosa's deceased body on the eastbound side of the tracks. Police said they did not suspect anything criminal led to the death.

THIS PHOTO SHOWS A SPOTTED LANTERNFLY, IN LONG BRANCH, NJ, ON AUGUST 7, 2022. KILL-ON-SIGHT REQUESTS IN NEW YORK CITY AND ELSEWHERE ARE PART OF AN AGGRESSIVE CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE INVASIVE PEST THAT HAS SPREAD TO ABOUT A DOZEN STATES IN EIGHT YEARS.

Public Urged to Kill Lanternflies Before They Reach Wine Country

BY TIMOTHY BOLGER

New York State agricultural officials are urging the public to kill on sight the spotted lanternfly, an invasive insect feeding on plants in New York City that could hurt North Fork wineries next.

Spotted lanternflies have been seen around much of the eastern United States. Pretty with red wing markings, the sap-sucking insect poses a danger to grapes and other agricultural crops, which is raising alarms. It also excretes a sticky substance called honeydew and can lay eggs on vehicles that hatch months later.

"Be vigilant," Chris Logue of the state Department of Agriculture told The Associated Press. "Check your vehicle. What you're really after is anything that maybe is alive, that is kind of hunkered down in there and is not going to get blown off the vehicle during the trip. Really, really important."

A native of Asia, the spotted lanternfly was first identified in the United States in 2014. It's likely that insect eggs came over with a load of landscaping stones. Eight years later, there are reported infestations in 13 states, mostly on the East Coast, according to the state Integrated Pest Management program at Cornell University. Individual insects have been spotted in more states.

"The spotted lanternfly sucks the sap out of the vines," said Brian Eshenaur, an expert with the Cornell pest program. "And it makes them less hardy for the winter, so vines can be lost over the growing season."

2 Balenciaga Theft Suspects Plead Guilty

BY TIMOTHY BOLGER

Two suspects have admitted to their role in stealing nearly $94,000 worth of high-end purses during a smash-and-grab theft in East Hampton that ended in a police chase earlier this year.

Baseemah Davis, 34, and Wazir Rodgers, 25, pleaded guilty to grand larceny at Suffolk County court. They were among five suspects who authorities said stole the handbags from the luxury retail store Balenciaga, although one unidentified suspect remains at large.

"We will not relent in holding those who steal the property of others accountable," said Suffolk County District Attorney Raymond Tierney. "The message here is clear, organized retail theft in Suffolk County will not be tolerated."

Prosecutors said Davis, Rodgers, 28-year-old Ali Abul Harris, and 25-year-old Jamal Revelt Johns, all of whom are from New Jersey, snatched the purses and fled before police captured the four suspects on the Long Island Expressway after they stopped their getaway vehicle and fled on foot on March 3.

Charges are pending against Harris and Johns. Davis and Rodgers are scheduled to be sentenced in September.

SAY CHEESE

Every issue of Dan's Papers includes page after page of photos of people in the Hamptons. They are attending celebrations, premieres, fundraisers, weddings, bar mitzvahs, birthday parties, ground-breakings and ribbon cuttings.

In every case, these people are smiling. People look their best when they are smiling. And if one or two of the people aren't, the photographer reminds everybody to smile, and if they are still not smiling, he discards that shot and uses another. So it goes.

The Hamptons has a wonderful history. It includes the landing of Nazi saboteurs during World War II here, Teddy Roosevelt in Montauk on horseback after the Spanish-American War, the terrible destruction force of the Hurricane of '38, rumrunners and bootleggers during Prohibition, and the catching of the biggest shark ever landed by rod and reel. I've found it fascinating. And in researching some of these stories to report on them in Dan's Papers, I've noticed something very interesting. Before a certain point in time, none of the people photographed smiled. After it, everybody smiled. Apparently, there was a particular moment when, after that, photographers would prompt everybody to "Say cheese."

When was it? And why was it? I don't think anybody has ever asked this question before.

Photography came into general use during the middle of the 19th century. Family portraits of farm families in the Hamptons exist. The images are in black and white. Nobody is smiling. We've all seen the portraits of Abe Lincoln. Smiling? Nope.

Move further along. The end of the 19th century features robber barons, Wall Street tycoons and a whole list of presidents who wore beards. Andrew Carnegie, Rutherford B. Hayes, Benjamin Harrison, James Garfield. Because of the beards, you'd think it would be hard to tell whether a man is smiling or not. But it isn't. None of them are.

Look further into the early 20th century. The Wright Brothers are not smiling. Henry Ford is not smiling. A man who is almost smiling is the aforementioned Roosevelt. But on closer look, his expression appears to be somewhere between a snarl and a roar. Anyway, when Roosevelt rose to power beardless, the customary beard fad dropped away, never to return.

After Roosevelt came famous, beardless people such as Robert Taft and Woodrow Wilson, each of whom was photographed extensively with wife and children, but all of whom are still not smiling. Also not smiling were Presidents Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover, who had good reason. Hoover was president when the great stock market crash came in 1929.

Here in the Hamptons during this era, you see portraits of Carl Fisher, the wealthy man who developed Montauk in the 1920s. Not smiling. Others with connections to the Hamptons during this era were inventor Thomas Edison and architect Stanford White. Sober and serious both.

I think the seminal moment for smiling in portrait photography really hit the ground running with the presidency of Franklin D. Roosevelt. First elected in 1932, he smiled at everybody, often with his head held high, a cigarette in a long holder jutting from his lips, and his jaw stuck out. He smiled until he passed on, 13 years later, still president.

Smiling presidents who came after him included Jack Kennedy, Jimmy Carter (who couldn't stop smiling), Ronald Reagan and Bill Clinton.

So it's been "Everybody smile" ever since. Even now, when there's not so much to smile about.

That's all there is to know about smiles, photographers and "Say cheese."

THIRD TERMS

Former President Donald Trump apparently continues to believe that the 2020 election was stolen from him, according to his legal team. Democrats would do well to approve this claim. Let's all agree that he was elected twice. There is the two-term rule (the 22nd amendment). Nobody is allowed to run for a third term. That's why former President Barack Obama didn't run in 2020. It's a law. So Trump can't run in 2024. He needs to step aside. I'm sure he understands that.

AMERIKA

America is in deep trouble. People live on street corners, in tents and in cars. Their jobs don't pay enough. They get fat on junk food, healthcare is in shambles, families don't stay together, college kids owe a fortune, Congress is paralyzed, AR-15 assault rifle shooters are on the rampage in schools, and outrageous lies are presented as truth. Did I miss anything? Oh, global warming.

We have been sliding into this for more than 20 years. You can't blame this on immigration, Silicon Valley or the liberals.

I blame it on the long-ago decision America made to police the world, frown on any culture that doesn't aspire to our way of life and then throw money to uplift all the poor people on the Earth so they can share the American dream at home. It's only fair. Remember when the richest man in America, Bill Gates, gave away $50 billion to build health clinics in Africa? Nothing for Americans.

We meant well. We really did. It just didn't work. We've knocked ourselves out.

SPRINKLER REQUEST

The Suffolk County Water Authority is asking people who have automatic sprinkler systems watering their lawns not to have them go on between midnight and 7 a.m. A lot of people choose 6 a.m. The sun rises, the lawns sparkle. But sprinkling all at the same time strains the system. The authority wants people to not sprinkle after midnight. Are people gonna do that? Guess.

DAN'S COLUMN

Kidd and Gardiner

BY DAN RATTINER

In 1699, the pirate Capt. William Kidd had treasure buried on Gardiners Island, the private island located between the Twin Forks. It's a true story, but the fact is that Kidd never did it. Instead, he got the owner of the island, Jonathan Gardiner, to bury it somewhere secret on the island. Kidd didn't want to know where. Why, you will soon see.

Kidd accomplished this artfully. He anchored his small sloop just offshore the island and waited. After two days, Gardiner, accompanied by some of his farmhands, rowed out to find out why the sloop was there.

Captain Kidd welcomed Gardiner aboard and introduced himself in a friendly manner. Gardiner had never heard of him. He inquired about Gardiner's family and whoever else was on the island. Kidd then told Gardiner he was on his way to see the governor of New York, his friend the Earl of Bellomont. But before departing, Kidd wanted to trade with Gardiner. He gave Gardiner three young slaves to keep, two boys and a girl, to take ashore. He gave Gardiner and his wife other gifts. For himself, a box of gold and a bundle of quilts. And for his wife, some Oriental muslin fabric. In return, Kidd asked if Gardiner could spare six sheep and a barrel of rum. Gardiner and his men rowed the gifts to shore, then returned with the sheep and the rum.

Gardiner, looking through the window of his manor house, saw Kidd's men rowing in. Could Gardiner come back out? He could. There, Kidd said he'd like to pay for the sheep and rum. Gardiner said he was owed nothing. With that, Kidd showed Gardiner this huge treasure he had below decks. Could Gardiner take it and bury it on the island to keep it safe? Kidd would come back to get it after a while.

Then Kidd said this: If it was not there when he returned, he would kill Gardiner and his family.

Of course, Gardiner took the treasure and did exactly what he was told to do. Later that day, Kidd fired his cannon in salute and sailed off.

Here, exactly, was what Gardiner buried. He wrote it down.

Historians are pretty sure they know why Kidd wanted it done this way. The King of England had declared him a fugitive and would pay a bounty to whoever caught him. Then the King would hang him. And Kidd knew this.

Kidd's only hope was Lord Bellomont, his friend and backer. He'd tell Bellomont where the treasure was. But not exactly. Then, he'd bring Bellomont to the island and John Gardiner would give the treasure to Bellomont. With that, Bellomont would protect Kidd and keep him safe.

But Kidd never came back. Eventually, Gardiner learned that Bellomont, fearful the King would arrest him too, had Kidd seized, arrested, then sent to London where he was tried, convicted and hanged. He was 47.

With that, Gardiner wrote to tell Bellomont he had the treasure. He wanted no part of it. Come and get it.

Soon thereafter, soldiers came to Gardiners Island, confirmed Gardiner's accounting of it (which is how we know this story) and took it all off his hands. The treasure went back to London.

Today, as then, Gardiners Island continues as a private island owned by descendants of the Gardiner family. You do not go to the island today unless invited by the owners.

Kidd lived a fascinating life. Born and raised in Scotland, he went off to sea as a teenager on a privateer's ship out of London. Privateers were supposed to steal back bounty from pirates. In the course of things, fellow crew members mutinied, and, at 25 years of age, elected Kidd captain. Changing the name of the ship to Blessed William (after King William), Kidd continued as a privateer and took treasure not only from pirate ships, but also French ships. England was at war with France at that time.

Five years later, Kidd sailed to New York City. His crew disbanded and he left off privateering to become a dashing young member of that town's upper crust. Among those he befriended was Gov. Bellomont. Soon afterwards, at 27, he married Sarah Bradley Cox, the richest woman in the City of New York. Kidd's funding helped build the Trinity Church in New York.

Four years later, Lord Bellomont asked Kidd to return to privateering. Bellomont and six others would partner in the venture and share the booty Kidd brought back. Among the investors, Kidd believed, was the King of England, who would be getting 10%. Kidd couldn't refuse. He'd be branded disloyal if he refused. As their ship, built in London, was now completed, Kidd was sent there to retrieve it.

Between 1695 and 1699, Captain Kidd boarded and plundered ship after ship. At one point, in Antigua, Kidd's crew threatened him if he didn't attack a particular Dutch privateer headed up by an English captain. When he refused, they quit, taking much of the booty with them. Kidd then sold the King William and with the money bought a 284 ton 34-cannon ship he called the Adventure Galley. But when a British Navy ship tried to impress 30 members of Kidd's new crew into military service, he refused. With that, the King declared Kidd a pirate, not a privateer. A price was put on his head.

Kidd fled to the Caribbean, abandoned the Adventure Galley, bought a sailboat, and with the treasure on board raced back toward New York hoping to get protected by Bellomont.

Kidd did his best with Gardiner, and he tried his best with Bellomont. But Bellomont would have none of it. And that is the story of Captain Kidd.

TWIN FORKS RESIDENTS ARE IGNORING REQUESTS TO ALL STOP WATERING THEIR LAWNS AT THE SAME TIME.

Water Worries: East End Dangerously Flouts Conservation Efforts Amid Drought

BY TIMOTHY BOLGER

East End residents are more concerned with ensuring their grass is greener than the other side than conserving water so firefighters can extinguish flames if a wildfire erupts amid an ongoing drought.

That's the word from local officials who have been pleading with the public to stagger the time when they water their lawns, especially on the South Fork, where residents have instead used more water than the region has in nearly a decade, according to the Suffolk County Water Authority (SCWA).

The agency has deployed mailers, road signs and robocalls, among other outreach efforts urging people to use less water, to no avail. It sent scouts into the community who reported finding most properties continue to water their lawns at the same time, around 6 a.m., as prevailing wisdom suggests is the ideal irrigation time.

"It is quite evident that our message goes pretty much unheeded," Michael O'Connell, SCWA's director of production control, told Dan's Papers.

New York State issued a drought watch for Suffolk and 21 other counties in late July after below-average rainfall this summer and has since expanded it to Nassau and most of the 62 counties statewide. SCWA also issued a Stage 1 Water Emergency Alert in the towns of Southampton, Southold, East Hampton and Shelter Island "to ensure that there is sufficient water for firefighting and other emergency purposes." The agency urged residents countywide to stop all irrigation between midnight and 7 a.m., refrain from all non-essential water usage, reduce shower times and embrace other water-saving measures.

As of August 18, the U.S. Drought Monitor placed the entire South Shore of Long Island under a severe drought, while the North Shore is experiencing moderate drought conditions. The county received 2.5 inches less rain than normal from August 1–22 and about half of the normal 10.35 inches of rain it sees from June 1 to August 22, the National Weather Service (NWS) reported. Despite a little bit of recent rainfall, the forecast as of press time did not show a break in the dry spell anytime soon.

"It looks like the conditions are going to continue," said James Tomasini, an Upton-based NWS meteorologist.

The issue is distinct from a megadrought in the West where reservoirs are drying up in the Colorado River Basin, which nearly 40 million Americans rely on for drinking water. In that case, banks along parts of the Colorado River where water once streamed are now just caked mud and rock as climate change makes the Western U.S. hotter and drier. More than two decades of drought have done little to deter the region from diverting more water than flows through it, depleting key reservoirs to levels that now jeopardize water delivery and hydropower production.

Long Island, however, gets its public drinking water from subterranean aquifers that are projected to hold hundreds of years worth of aqua. The issue locally is that the SCWA infrastructure — the pumps, water towers and mains — are working at capacity to keep up with the increased demand caused by the drought.

O'Connell said Southampton and East Hampton used about 38,000 gallons of water per minute around 5 a.m., which is indicative of widespread sprinkler use and is the most the agency has seen since 2015. By comparison, at 6 p.m., when most people are awake and businesses are open, the area uses about 15,000 gallons per minute, he added.

"When everybody is supposedly still in bed, we're pumping more than double ... than we are when people are active, stores are open," he said. "That's a lot of water for irrigation."

The demand would inhibit firefighters ability to douse flames at those peak water use hours.

"We have about every asset we own operating at full capacity, and we're still getting dangerously low in our water storage tanks to the point where we're concerned that if there were to be an emergency at that point in time

"If there's a fire, we're going to have some serious issues," said Michael O'Connell of the Suffolk County Water Authority.

— because of the lower storage which leads to a lower water pressure — if there's a fire, we're going to have some serious issues," O'Connell said.

The concern spilled over to local fire officials, especially given the risk of wildfires during a drought. A stubborn wildfire that broke out near Montauk earlier this summer burned about 25 acres in a hard-to-reach brushland.

"Unfortunately, during times of such dry conditions, we see an increase in the number of brush and wildland fires," said Town of Brookhaven Chief Fire Marshal Christopher Mehrman, noting that the issue is especially concerning in wooded areas, such as the Pine Barrens, the vast woodlands preserved to protect the aquifers from pollution.

During a recent news conference reminding New Yorkers that September is National Preparedness Month and peak Atlantic Hurricane season, Gov. Kathy Hochul joined in calls to urge residents to give the sprinklers a rest for the good of the community.

"We all love green grass, but there's always next year," she said. "Only water lawns when really necessary, reuse water that you can collect in barrels. Raise lawnmower to higher, doesn't always have to be this short. You can raise up the mower cutting levels as well. And you know, just simple things like not having to hose down a sidewalk, use a broom for God's sakes. You can do this, and fix all the leaky pipes. So, there are a lot of things you can do as an individual. Collectively, it makes a difference."

SCWA's O'Connell agreed.

"People don't need to irrigate on a daily basis," he said, suggesting residents water their lawns in the afternoon or evening instead to stagger demand. "Every other day is more than enough."

One Meadow Lane Property Sells for $48 Million, Another in Contract

THE PROPERTY WITH THE TENNIS COURT AT 1100 MEADOW LANE IS STILL AVAILABLE, BUT THE OTHER, AT 1080 MEADOW LANE, IS IN CONTRACT.

THE VIEW FROM MEADOW LANE

AS SEEN IN 2020, THE PROPERTY AT 1080 AND 1100 MEADOW LANE WAS TOGETHER LAST ASKING $78 MILLION, WHILE THE NEIGHBORING PROPERTY AT 1116 MEADOW LANE JUST SOLD FOR $48 MILLION.

BY TAYLOR K. VECSEY

Big activity happening in a small pocket on Billionaires Row in Southampton Village, all involving oceanfront properties that once belonged to billionaire media executive Robert F. X. Sillerman.

One Meadow Lane property, which sold in 2020 for $36 million, sold again this year for $48 million, and another Meadow Lane property, last asking $44.95 million, is under contract for $44.95 million.

Both deals are among the top 10 deals of 2022 so far.

Harald Grant of Sotheby's International Realty brokered the deal for 1116 Meadow Lane, which, according to Suffolk County deed transfers, closed on June 17, 2022. The brokerage declined to comment further.

1080 Meadow Lane, In Contract

Meanwhile, Grant and Hedgerow Exclusive Properties have a co-exclusive on the property at 1080 Meadow Lane, which is poised to close soon.

Grant and Hedgerow had been marketing 1080 Meadow Lane and 1100 Meadow Lane, the property in between 1080 and 1116 Meadow, at $78 million, placing it among the most expensive real estate in the Hamptons. There were conceptual designs for a compound on the two-lot, eight-acre spread consisting of an 18,000-square-foot main residence with an oceanside pool, along with a 7,500-square-foot guest house with tennis court.

The single property, last asking $44.95 million on its own, offers 295 feet of direct oceanfront. Currently, there is a beach house, two golf greens and a golf house on the five acres — all part of the estate that once belonged to Sillerman, who held an interest in Elvis Presley's Graceland and was founder of the electronic dance music company SFX Entertainment. He also served as the chancellor at Southampton College.

The three contiguous lots Sillerman once owned offer breathtaking 360-degree views of the Atlantic Ocean and Shinnecock Bay.

He sold 1116 Meadow Lane in 2014 for $37.5 million, and in 2016, he sold 1080 Meadow Lane for $38 million and 1100 Meadow Lane for $38 million.

The following year, the properties at 1080, 1100 and 1116 Meadow Lane were offered for sale together, as a 14-acre compound, asking $150 million. It was, in 2017, the most expensive listing on the market.

Two Years and $12 Million Later, 1116 Meadow Sells Again

The 3.65-acre property at 1116 Meadow Lane, with a 12,000-square-foot house built in 2010 with 200 feet of oceanfront, sold on its own on August 28, 2020, for $36 million. Grant also brokered that deal.

After the 2020 sale, the remaining parcels at 1080 and 1100 Meadow were asking $90 million in 2020.

The deed transfers for 1116 Meadow Lane last week show Meadow Lane Propco LP sold to 1116 Meadow Holdings LP.

One More Left at 1100 Meadow Lane

The remaining property available at 1100 Meadow Lane offers three acres and 200 feet of oceanfront, as well as a 5,000-square-foot existing "tennis" house next to the tennis court at 1100 Meadow Lane. A private walkway leads to the beach.

"The existing home can be fully renovated or the lot can accommodate a brand new 10,000 plus/minus residence along with tennis," the Hedgerow listing says.

The asking price is $39.5 million.

Photographer Steven Klein Offers Equestrian Compound for Rent During Hampton Classic Horse Show

BY TAYLOR K. VECSEY

Renowned photographer Steven Klein, who has worked with Madonna and Lady Gaga and whose images have appeared in many high-fashion magazines, is looking to rent his equestrian compound in Bridgehampton, not far from the Hampton Classic Horse Show.

Klein's striking home and nearby stable with four available stalls in a well-appointed 12-stall barn, an exercise ring and paddocks are available for two weeks for $95,000.

The exclusive rental at 1971 Scuttlehole Road, ideally located between Bridgehampton and Sag Harbor Village, just came on the market with Bill Williams of Compass. He calls it "a one-of-a-kind farm property that will fit the needs of participants and spectators alike."

The five-bedroom home is part of a four-acre farm that is five minutes to the Hamptons Classic show grounds on Mitchell Lane, as well as the equestrian estate of his longtime friend Madonna. The show starts Sunday, August 28 and finishes with the Grand Prix on Sunday, September 4.

"This is rare because a lot of people just rent houses for themselves, their families or their grooms even," Williams says. But, here people can bring their horses too.

Klein is known for his fashion photography and celebrity portraits. He rose to fame in the late 1990s and early 2000s for his ability to combine commercial and transgressive photography. His work has appeared on the pages of Vogue, W, Interview and other magazines across the world.

The photographer is no stranger to the Hampton Classic. In 2007, he was selected as the poster artist for the 32nd annual horse show. The black-and-white photograph captured the muscular neck of a dappled gray horse, which was at the time the first poster that has shown a horse without a head. He has done a whole series of equestrian black-and-white photographs.

Horseback riding has long been a passion and he built his Bridgehampton home around it. The ring, the paddocks and the barn surround the house.

Meanwhile, the interiors reflect Klein's eclectic taste and feature many of his stunning photographs, including equestrian ones. Architectural Digest featured his home and "edgy aesthetic" in 2014.

Klein bought the property in 2003, then owned by a pair of artists. He converted an already-existing barn into a stable.

Still, he says, "There's nothing overdone in the house. It's understated. A comfortable country house with a lot of outdoor spaces and big doors that lead outside."

The dates are flexible. "It can start tomorrow," Williams says.

Klein is also selling a neighboring tract of land that is part of West Kill Farm — a cleared 30-acre agricultural reserve on the corner of Lumber Lane and Scuttlehole Road, exclusively listed with Barbara Bornstein and Ann Ciardullo of Sotheby's International Realty. The price tag: $10 million.

FASHION PHOTOGRAPHER STEVEN KLEIN, CENTER, WILL RENT HIS EQUESTRIAN COMPOUND FOR THE TWO WEEKS AROUND THE HAMPTON CLASSIC FOR $95,000.

While a residence cannot be built on the property at 819 Lumber Lane, it can support equestrian endeavors and a variety of agricultural uses. "Surrounded by dramatic black flat-oak horse fencing," according to the listing, Klein currently uses the field "to school and turn out his Grand Prix show jumpers."

We hear Klein has a new coffee table book coming out in the fall. "The first and only monograph on Klein, whose hyperreal and sexually charged images have captivated viewers for 30 years," will be released on November 9. Edited by Mark Holborn, the book will survey Klein's work.

"One of the fashion industry's most cunning provocateurs, photographer Steven Klein has created many of the most iconic images of our time," the description reads. "Klein's photographs blur the line between fiction and reality, resulting in stunning tableaux that only exist within his fantastical worlds. Although his images include some of the most photographed people in the world, they disappear into the narrative of Klein's imagination."

6 Roof Maintenance Tips You Need To Know

The roof protects your home and family from all kinds of weather, bugs, animals and falling debris. It's not something many people think about often.

Here are six things homeowners can do to maintain their roof to help ensure it lasts for an average of 25 years.

1. Do a twice-annual inspection in the spring and fall to check for loose or missing shingles, damage, buckling, broken gutters, or piles of granules.
2. Clean the gutters several times a year so water doesn't back up and rot the fascia.
3. Trim the trees so a storm doesn't cause branches to fall on your roof.
4. Check for moss and algae. Avoid such growth by keeping the attic properly ventilated, removing debris, and trimming overhang.
5. Re-caulk, if necessary. If a low-grade caulking was used to install the roof, call an expert to see if re-caulking it needed.
6. Check the insulation and ventilation in the attic to help keep the roof in good condition by reducing moisture and preventing ice dams from forming.

Honoring This Week's Cover Artist: Cara Van Leuven

BY DAVID TAYLOR

This week's cover features the official 2022 Hampton Classic Horse Show poster by Cara Van Leuven. Here, she discusses her affinity for long-legged horses, the moment she received confirmation that her art would become part of Hampton Classic's history and more.

What inspired the creation of "Dream Gait" and how were the horse's pose and background's colors chosen?

"Dream Gait" was inspired last year at the Hampton Classic by the horses themselves. Because I bring my dogs and husband (he's not banned from the Boutique Garden — it's only fair to point that out), my booth sits along Stable Row. There's no location I would rather be.

I had so much eye candy paraded in front of me last year that there was no way I couldn't paint those horses. They were groomed, trained and bred to the hilt. Many of those horses knew it too, and would showcase their good fortune while walking down the shed rows. The big movements of some of the hunters really inspired this painting — and OMG, that toe flick.

The intrinsic movement and the pride those horses carry is what inspired the artwork — bold movements, getting the job done, the inflated egos — I was drooling and felt compelled to capture that essence in a painting.

I wish I could provide a more eloquent answer to the colors chosen, but my use of color is pretty organic. I've never had a class on color theory; the colors I use are simply appealing to me, and I choose them (top and base coat) from the way they either complement or contrast one another. I'm fortunate that many collectors find the choices pleasing as well.

What does your creation process typically look like?

It all starts with observing horses. I can spend hours upon hours staring at the way they move, communicate, nap, bicker. Sometimes I climb on their back and stare at clouds in the sky looking for shapes within the white fluff.

After daydreaming, I'll hit the studio. Each painting, from start to finish, is a minimum of 30 days. I prime all my canvases and boards myself. Once that glue coat is dry, I then add a base coat. In a few days after drying, I'll either add a top coat or a horse. My technique varies per painting.

I revisit the painting quite often, adding more layers and touches of interest throughout the course that the painting is on the easel.

Why is "Dream Gait" an ideal choice for a Hampton Classic poster, and what inspired you to submit it?

Several years ago, a friend encouraged me to enter the poster competition. The first year I wasn't selected, but I was excited to enter again for 2022. When I received the email congratulating me, I was closing a gate on a farm in Micanopy, just outside Ocala (FL), and it was impossible to comprehend what the message was.

I stood there at the gate while my husband was waiting in the truck for me. I had to read the email three times. Finally, I closed that gate, got in the truck white as a sheet and handed him my phone. I said, "Does this really mean what I think it does?"

It's truly a gift to have been chosen because it was inspired, on location, at the Hampton Classic. I recognize my work is a bit abstract, but I'm delighted the committee embraced a different point of view.

Per your artist bio, when did you begin to associate long legs with a horse's fragility and beauty, and why do you think long-legged horses have become such a strong muse for your art?

This is a bit of a sad story, but it has evolved into something that has defined my style and one all horse people can relate to.

The first horse I ever backed was this easy-going Westfalian mare. I worked with her every day for months and months. By the time I got on her back for the first time, our bond was so strong, the whole incident was a non-event.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

"STARTING COLTS" BY CARA VAN LEUVEN

However, as time went on, I could tell something was just not right with her. I spent at least a year trying to uncover what it was and a final diagnosis uncovered EPM, acute navicular changes and a bone deformity in her front left. I euthanized her at the age of five. My heart still aches over that loss.

When all this was going on, horses seemed so fragile. My vet bills were insane, as you can imagine. That's when the legs on my paintings got longer and longer. My work is incredibly autobiographical, and I was inadvertently telling the story of me losing touch helping this mare.

Unfortunately, within this sport with these animals, the fragility will never disappear. We as horsemen spend endless hours and lose so much sleep thinking about how to do best by them. Horses are so generous; I think most of us understand that and have made a silent pledge to care for their delicacy the best we can.

Not counting this stunning poster, what artistic accomplishment or achievement are you most proud of?

What a great question. Even though it was 2000, I am still really proud of being a recipient for the Alexia for World Peace and Cultural Understanding. That award in photojournalism allowed me to study with Syracuse University in London. It opened my eyes to the power of art to make a change and invoke feelings and understanding.

I've been featured and published in magazines like Untacked and (soon) Sidelines.

However, what tops the list is redefining my life so much later in life. I didn't become a full-time artist until I was 40. The people who have supported me and encouraged me on this endeavor are my lifeline. My entire life, I have relied on the kindness of strangers and being able to lean on friends, and none of this would be possible without them.

What are you most looking forward to at the 2022 Hampton Classic?

My favorite part is being near the schooling ring. It's fascinating to watch the different approaches to training. There's so much to learn.

I leave Mexico City tomorrow (at the time of writing) after spending five weeks as an artist in residency at El Sur. I was commenting that going to the Hampton Classic is much like a foreign country in and of itself. It's a diverse horse show with many cultures and countries congregating in one area.

"OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW BETTER" BY CARA VAN LEUVEN

The Hamptons is a magical place. I feel incredibly fortunate to be able to experience this part of the country. The swans in the waters, the impeccable landscaping, the preserved nature is really special.

Would you like to share any closing thoughts or additional information?

1. I am a horse lover first and foremost, artist second.

2. Walking takes too long so I sprint almost everywhere.

3. My background is in photography, and I won my first contest with a photo of my horse's back shoe catching the sun's rays.

4. Border collies and other neurotic breeds are my favorite because I feel like we have a lot in common.

5. I own and ride a motorcycle — a Harley Forty-Eight Sportster.

6. Every discipline in the horse world fascinates me. There is so much knowledge and so much to learn from great horsemen.

7. Cheese and cookies are my favorite food.

8. I share equal love for the countryside and the city.

9. People's stories and lives fascinate me, but I'm an introvert and need a lot of solo time and space.

10. My favorite art form is dance.

46th Hampton Classic Horse Show: Newly Upgraded & Highly Accessible

BY DAVID TAYLOR

Longtime fans of the Hampton Classic Horse Show will undoubtedly notice some big changes at the 2022 event. With newly designated 5-star and 2-star status classes, the Grand Prix Ring's new all-weather footing, premiere divisions and the inaugural Special Olympics New York Summer Series, it's looking to be a fresh, but still familiar, show at the 46th annual Hampton Classic August 28–September 4.

"We try to do things that are new and fresh, but also, we keep the word 'classic' in our name and take it seriously, so we don't want to lose the feel of the show," says Shanette Barth Cohen, Hampton Classic executive director. "I think we've done a good job balancing that."

The first of the big 2022 changes is the upgrade to a Grand Prix arena with state-of-the-art, high-performance, all-weather footing. The decision to renovate the footing came quickly after the grass used last year proved less than reliable.

"Last year on opening day, the grass was just not holding up well," Cohen explains. "We had to, during the show, pull up the grass and do a quick fix transformation by bringing in some sand and working the footing that was underneath the grass so that we got through the week. It was actually a great competition on the final Sunday — it all worked out well — but to put in all-weather footing, we wanted to make sure we had really excellent footing and not just Band-Aid footing."

What the Hampton Classic organizers didn't realize when first considering the switch was just how many other doors this decision would open.

"We don't have to baby it the way we did the grass; we can have more competition, so there are more contests that are going to be in our Grand Prix Ring now," Cohen continues. "Because we moved some things that were in Jumper 2 into the Grand Prix Ring, now we can move things that were elsewhere into Jumper 2 or add divisions. Everything has a domino effect, so that's enabled us to have a lower height for the amateurs and children in the Jumpers and a lower height for the adult Hunters and the children Hunter horses ... and some professional divisions at lower heights, as well, that we've not been able to do in the past. All of that really stems back to the footing in the Grand Prix Ring."

The debut divisions — Low Adult and Children's Hunters, Low Child/Adult Jumpers, and 3'3" and 3'6" Performance Hunters — have opened up the Hampton Classic to exhibitors who previously had no opportunity to ride in the event. With the new footing and increase in divisions available to riders, the Classic has been able to increase its prize money pool to a total $1 million, with an impressive $410,000 being awarded to the winner of the now Grand Prix, qualifying it as a 5-star Fédération Equestre Internationale competition. The jump from the Grand Prix's former 4-star status to 5-star places it on par with the world's most prestigious equestrian events, just below the Olympics' tier, and it entices world-class international riders to compete, creating an increasingly competitive Grand Prix. In total, the 46th annual Classic is hosting four 5-star FEI classes and three 2-star FEI classes.

Also new this year is the Special Olympics New York Summer Series, spotlighting riders with disabilities from Long Island, New York City and Hudson Valley. Special Olympics NY had approached the Hampton Classic, through the US Equestrian Federation, about using the Bridgehampton event as part of their pilot program to produce horse shows throughout New York. This event for differently abled competitors will run in addition to the Long Island Horse Show Series for Riders with Disabilities finals presented by Dime Bank, which Cohen helped start in 2006.

"The LIHSSRD program, the Long Island Horse Show Series for Riders with Disabilities, is one of the things I'm particularly proud of in my role as executive director," she says. "I was approached about it, so we brought that in and it's still doing well. That was 17 years ago, so that's exciting for me."

Cohen adds that LIHSSRD was first pitched to her as a non-competitive exhibition, but she saw the opportunity to give these riders a true competition of their own. "They're also athletes, and they work hard at their sport at the level they're able to participate at," she says. Now adding a second competition for differently abled riders, the Hampton Classic is reaffirming their commitment to keeping horse competitions accessible to all.

Last on the new news front are the return of Kids Day from Thursday back to Saturday, fresh shops to explore in the Agneta Currey Boutique Garden and on Stable Row and infrastructure changes to keep the horse show "as safe as possible for horses and spectators alike." The 2022 event is packed with over 200 competitions in six show rings, 70 boutique vendors and a wide selection of dining options.

Beyond all the exciting changes this year, the

FIVE-TIME OLYMPIAN MCLAIN WARD HAS WON THE HAMPTON CLASSIC GRAND PRIX A RECORD SEVEN TIMES.

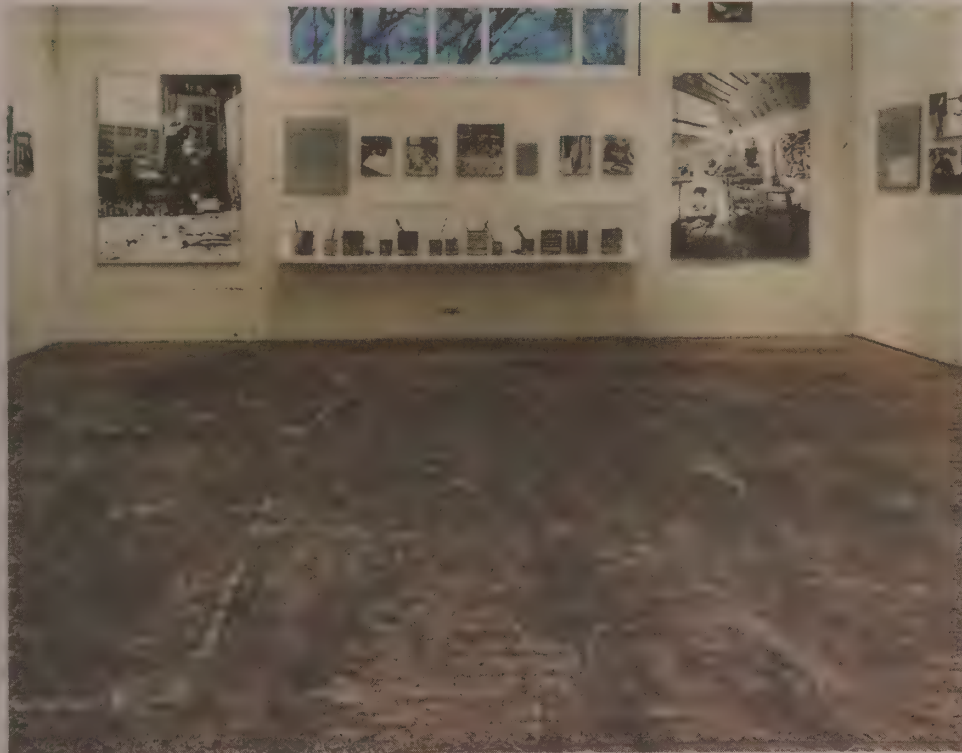

Hampton Classic remains a true Hamptons classic that's accessible to horse enthusiasts of any background or status. Daily admission to the Classic is only $20 cash per carload, with only the September 4 Grand Prix grandstand tickets costing an additional $55 for reserved seating. Plus, there are several opportunities to get in for free: Admission is totally free on Monday, the Classic's pet and horse adoption day; seniors and military get in free on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday; and anyone who brings three or more non-perishable food items for the Sag Harbor Food Pantry gets their car in free on Tuesday or Wednesday. And on Kids Day on Saturday, September 3, children under 12 are admitted free and receive a free pony ride.

"The Hampton Classic has something for everyone, because there's so much going on and it's so inexpensive to come," Cohen says.

Joel Perlman Is Back in Black at Mark Borghi Fine Art

BY OLIVER PETERSON

Water Mill artist Joel Perlman, known worldwide for his large steel sculptures, is exhibiting a brand-new series of small bronzes at Mark Borghi Fine Art in Bridgehampton through September 16.

Dubbed “The Black Series” for their rich, inky patina, Perlman created all nine sculptures in the Joel Perlman: New Works show locally at his home studio last winter. He used what he calls the “lost-styrofoam method” as a nod to the 6,500-year-old lost-wax casting technique, where a sculpture is made of wax, put in a mold and then replaced by poured molten metal. In this case, instead of wax, Perlman first constructs his sculptures out of half-inch-thick sheets of dense insulation foam, but the process of turning that foam into metal — which is achieved at a foundry in Thailand — remains very similar to that of his ancient forebears.

“I’ll spend a couple of hours just making shapes, until I have a big pile of them. And then I’ll start to stick some stuff together. Initially I do it just with a hot glue gun and toothpicks,” the artist says, pointing out that he never plans his sculptures before making them.

Instead, Perlman finds his compositions through exploration and the creative process. “I’m just winging it. I have no idea what’s going to happen until I’m doing it,” he adds, explaining that deciding when to stop is one of his most difficult challenges. “When I get something, I let it sit for a while and then I’ll look at it again, and eventually I’ll commit to it,” he says, adding later, “You just try and find that magic spot.”

Demonstrating his keen artistic eye, and indeed an ability to stop at just the right time, each piece comprises dozens of foam cutouts, and his finished creations cast complex silhouettes, alive with movement. Only one of the sculptures at Mark Borghi’s gallery exceeds a height of 24 inches because, Perlman says, this manageable size is ideal for his Water Mill studio where he made them.

The artist usually splits his time between NYC (where he teaches at the School of Visual Arts) and the Hamptons, but he settled full-time in Water Mill during the pandemic, and now commutes to the city to teach his classes, which he still enjoys.

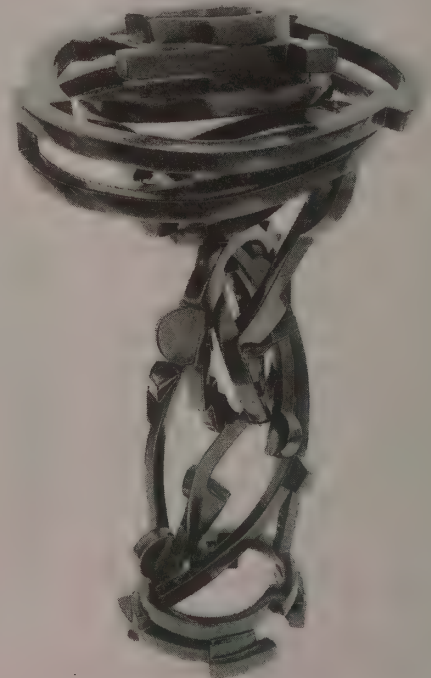

“About maybe the early, early ’70s I came out here,” Perlman, 79, says, explaining how he first fell in love with the East End. “I had an art moving company to support myself and I delivered a piece out here on a spring day, and the sun was out and the light was so incredible, and I thought, ‘I’ve never seen a place like this, I’ve got to somehow get out here.’”

Some 50 years later, the now-successful artist has a lovely home and studio here and adds his latest show to a long list of exhibitions and accolades, including being a recipient of the John Simon Guggenheim Foundation Fellowship, a National Endowment for the Arts grant and a Pollock-Krasner Foundation Award, as well as having work in important collections, like the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden in Washington, D.C., the Los Angeles County Museum, the Whitney Museum of American Art and the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Amazingly, considering they put this exhibition together so quickly, Perlman and Borghi only hooked up about a month ago when they ran into each other at an art opening in Sag Harbor. “I had just gotten the black pieces back, the whole shipment from Thailand, so I invited him over and, as opposed to most dealers, he said, ‘Oh great, I’ll come in on Monday,’” Perlman recalls. “And he came, and I said to him, ‘I’d really like to show some stuff in Bridge.’”

Borghi agreed and then assembled Perlman’s show in record time.

“He set up the whole show by himself. When I came, it was already up, and I just loved it the way it was,” Perlman says, complimenting the gallerist’s curatorial prowess. “I think he’s very good at that. He’s got a terrific eye, and he’s very, very knowledgeable about art history.”

For his part, Perlman likes his work to present a precarious feeling to go along with the more formal concerns an art historian might describe. “The element of danger is really important to me — I love all that stuff. I had 50 years of motorcycles, and I have a sports car. I like stuff that goes fast,” he says, also noting in the Borghi show announcement, “Weight, danger, movement, negative space are the elements. For inspiration I look at the past, I try and look into the future, I look at everything. I never know where the next idea will come from. It’s an adventure, a journey every time.”

Joel Perlman: New Works is on view at Mark Borghi Fine Art in Bridgehampton (2426 Main Street). Visit markborghi.com for more info.

Bar and bat mitzvah celebrations in Spain

About a year ago, we began planning a family vacation to celebrate the bar and bat mitzvahs for my two grandchildren.

Israel was our destination to celebrate the brilliant and kind Blake's bar mitzvah. Now, his sister Morgan and their cousin Jonah had their bat and bar mitzvahs at their synagogue. We decided to have a family celebration in Spain mainly because my nephew Danny Adler owns the travel company Adler & Marlow specializing there and offered to help us organize a celebration.

With the aid of my daughter Samantha, who's good at figuring out the details, we decided on a 10-day trip to the ancient city of Barcelona, followed by a few days at a resort in Costa Brava before ending with a visit to Madrid.

We waited in line for the best gelato at Gocce di Latte!

Our adventure began with a relaxing flight to Barcelona on American Airlines — it was more like being on a smooth sailboat than a plane.

The landing in Barcelona was as smooth as silk and my fears of my family traveling together were softened when we arrived.

Our guide greeted us at the baggage area and, at 6:30 a.m., we stuffed our luggage into the van that was to carry us to our hotel in Barcelona.

We arrived too early to check into our rooms, so we stopped at a coffee shop with delicious pastries.

Danny had booked us into Casagrand Luxury Suites, which offers apartment-style suites featuring a living room, kitchen and even a laundry room! The kids were happy that it even had a rooftop pool and gym!

Basilica de la Sagrada Família was Antoni Gaudí's extraordinary design. When completed, it will be the tallest church in the world.

The location was a perfect launchpad for our day trips around the city with a population of about 1.7 million people that is, geographically, about the size of Brooklyn and Queens combined.

The city is famous for its great food and wine, as well as its unique architecture. For me, nothing compared to the genius of architect Antoni Gaudí, who put his unique stamp on an enormous number of projects in and around Barcelona.

Elizabeth at the staircase at El Nacional.

We visited the stunning, enormous and not yet completed Basilica de la Sagrada Família, which is 150 years in the making. For 43 years, it was Gaudí's life mission to create a perfect temple for prayer and religious worship.

As I walked through the unique doors, I was stunned by the enormous interior that Gaudí wanted to make people feel like they were in a celestial space. The roof is held up by what looks like tree trunks surging into the sky. I felt so tiny as I made my way around this unique house of worship. When it is finally completed, it will be the tallest church in the world!

Born in 1852, Gaudí's prolific career came to an abrupt halt in 1926 when he was run over by a tram as he was still working on the church.

His fanciful details make each building recognizable as a Gaudí! I loved looking at each one. Maybe the word "gaudy" comes from his name, because each work is colorful and full of twists and turns. Even the pinnacles at the top of the church are both colorful and fanciful!

From the Basilica, we went to a site that overlooks a part of the city with church spires spiking through the skyline of burnt red roofs.

Dinner was a feast for the eyes and stomach at El Nacional. It's a restaurant with multiple offerings in an enormous space. There are different sections throughout the restaurant: one serving steak and meats; another serving pasta; one serving tapas; another offering gelato; and also a massive bar! Every table was taken in each area with lines to get in!

We cooked our own 10-course meal at Camela Fina in Barcelona.

Since some of the kids don't like meat, the restaurant allowed us to order pasta from another area and had it quickly delivered to our table.

We enjoyed such a unique meal that filled each person's palate!

The next day was for me one I

My children walking in the ancient Jewish quarter.

will cherish forever.

We celebrated the bar and bat mitzvahs of Jonah and Morgan in a centuries-old building in the heart of El Call, Barcelona's medieval Jewish Quarter.

Casa Adret, now a Jewish community center, had been the oldest inhabited house in the city that was owned in the 12th century as the "palace house" of the Jewish-Catalan merchant Astruc Adret, who had been forced to convert to Christianity after the pogroms of 1391. In 1492, Queen Isabella forced the total expulsion or conversion of all Jewish people.

In one of the oldest houses of the Jewish Quarter, Jonah and Morgan (our bar and bat mitzvahs) stood proudly in the building's ancient rooms reciting specially written prayers for the occasion.

A special meal was prepared by the directors of the center and it was the best meal of our vacation! Each dish was based on a key ingredient linking to our traditions and history of Jewish food in Spain.

Morgan and Jonah reciting specially prepared commentary.

During the August 18 ceremony, we enjoyed the Sephardic music performed by extraordinary musicians playing guitars and drums, vocals and percussion.

The joy and pride and smiles of all six children is burnt into my memory bank forever!

As we continue our journey, make sure to tune in to next week's column and visit QNS.com or DansPapers.com to see more photos!

After the service in the ancient site, we took a family photo.

East End Seaport Museum: Keepers of Bug Light & Greenport History

BY DAVID TAYLOR

Centrally located at Greenport's train station, Hampton Jitney stop and Shelter Island ferry loading zone, the East End Seaport Museum is the first stop on many voyagers' visit to the North Fork fishing village; however, many don't realize the museum's significance in the village's history, its role starring role in the upcoming Maritime Festival or the responsibility it holds in keeping local history alive, both in people's minds and in a once-destroyed lighthouse off the Long Beach Bar.

The Museum

With a change in leadership this summer, Interim Director Tracey Orlando hit the ground running. She had served as a volunteer for over 25 years in various capacities, including as secretary of the museum board, when the board decided to assess how she would perform in her first directorial role. Anyone lucky enough to receive a museum tour from her should see just how passionate she is about the museum and Greenport's history.

"It's been a blast and it's been a joy. I really enjoy what we're doing here, and we're making a difference," she says. "We sit in the transportation hub to expose as many visitors to what Greenport is all about — almost like the welcome station (or ambassadors) to the village."

The museum features new exhibitions every year, each delving into a different aspect of Greenport's maritime history — from whaling and oystering to World War II fishing fleets. Some of the fascinating objects on display include the "sword" of a swordfish, a whale tooth scrimshaw, the original fourth order Fresnel lens from the Plum Island Lighthouse and the massive second order Fresnel lens from the Little Gull Island Lighthouse. And one of the most photographed exhibits is "The Year That Was Knot" by Chris Heyen, a collection of 365 types of knots, one created each day throughout a year of the pandemic.

One of the most cutting-edge attractions at the museum is an augmented sandbox designed by 15-year-old Jack McInnis using his old Xbox Kinect, a projector his dad bought for the project and a wooden sandbox donated by a local cabinetmaker. The ingenious setup teaches children (and adults) about topography, allowing them to move the sand to create mountains and valleys or press a button to cause a flood or drought.

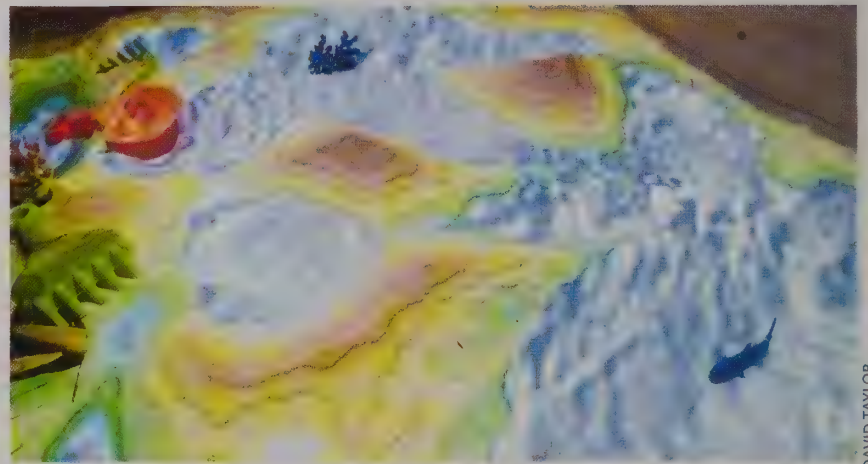

"We're pretty proud that we have this amazing opportunity because a very talented young man gave it to us," Orlando says, adding that in addition to the children's room filled with toys and learning devices, the museum also offers scheduled children's programming and scholarships throughout the year. Adult programming is offered, as well.

One of the museum's most prized exhibits, dating back to 1989, was their Sea Life exhibit — a 750-gallon, self-circulating saltwater aquarium that once housed exclusively specimens found in local waters and served as an invaluable educational resource for North Fork students. Unfortunately, during the pandemic, the tank sprung a leak, and since the manufacturer no longer exists, it will have to be replaced. Plans to not only replace but upgrade the system include a chiller to keep the self-circulation system from getting too warm, an iPad to teach children about the sea robins and other specimens in the tank. A $50,000 grant from the Robert D.L. Gardiner Foundation is a major step toward replacing the tank, and only $30,000 more are needed, which Orlando hopes will come via a few corporate sponsors in time to have everything set up by springtime.

This replacement, while important to the museum and local students, falls outside of the museum's September relaunch of their capital campaign, which focuses on a vital renovation of the Long Beach Bar Lighthouse aka Bug Light. The Seaport Museum is synonymous with Bug Light due to its weekly cruises to and tours inside of the 19th-century lighthouse (every Saturday through October), as well as its founding history, which is intrinsically tied to Bug Light.

"The bigger picture is: She's (Bug Light) our mission statement, she's the only reason we're here, and that's why the capital project is so important," Orlando says. For those unfamiliar with the dramatic tale, here's a brief history.

The Lighthouse

Answering an 1869 plea by East End fishermen for the construction of a Long Beach Bar lighthouse, Congress provided $17,000 toward the project and had the Long Beach Bar Lighthouse lit by December 1871. Guiding ships to safe harbor atop its screwpile foundation, many remarked that it looked like a water bug from afar, resulting in its commonly used nickname "Bug Light." Throughout its years in service, Bug Light housed many lighthouse keepers and assistants who lived there 24/7.

When the infamous Hurricane of 1938 struck the lighthouse, it did considerable damage, compromising the cistern, but leaving the keeper and his son unharmed. The damage was repaired, and the screwpile foundation that gave it its nickname was replaced with a foundation in the style that can be seen today. However, because the hurricane reshaped and extended the sandbar beyond the lighthouse, it was deemed an inefficient channel marker by the U.S. Coast Guard, who decided to decommission it in 1948.

"Locally, you would think that it would hurt us," says Orlando. "But it didn't matter to us because we could still see her every time we passed her. We still felt her. She still had a connection to our village and the people that fished here. (She was always) looking after us."

No longer being used as a government-run navigational tool, the abandoned lighthouse became a hangout spot for local teens. On the July 4, 1963, three teenagers did what even a hurricane couldn't — they destroyed Bug Light. And all it took was a match. Though their intent is still debated, arson or an unintentional fireworks mishap, the fact of the matter was that the Greenport icon had been burnt down to its foundation.

"It broke our hearts. What was the result of that fire was a burnt-out, scarred-up foundation that we all had to look out at and know that she was gone," Orlando says. "There was always a feeling that she had been stolen from us, and we always talked about how we could put her back in her rightful place. We're not the government, and back then, we were a small fishing village, we didn't have the money."

Two decades went by, and the Greenport families that witnessed the fire or its aftermath couldn't shake the feeling that an important symbol of their village was missing. Some of these families joined to create the East End Seaport Museum and Marine Foundation in 1989, which, under Merlon Wiggins' leadership, raised $140,000 toward the goal of creating a working replica of Bug Light. Local experts put their heads together and decided that the best way to do this was to build each floor separately, on land, then carry them via barge to Bug Light's island to be placed one layer at a time by crane. Within only four hours of assembly, the lighthouse was lit. In 1993, the Coast Guard saw the value of Greenport's guiding light once more, and recommissioned Bug Light.

"They put her back on charts, and she is truly doing what she was meant to be"

WATER DAMAGE INSIDE BUG LIGHT, WHICH THE CAPITAL CAMPAIGN'S RENOVATIONS WILL HELP PREVENT

LONG BEACH BAR LIGHTHOUSE AKA BUG LIGHT

Orlando says. "She is a guardian and a navigational aid."

While modern lighthouses' LED lights require no live-in keepers, the East End Seaport Museum certainly does keep a close eye on Bug Light. There has been only one major repair needed in the 33 years since Bug Light was resurrected, with additional patchwork done last September and this month to mitigate water intrusion. A donation from the Gardiner Foundation, that was matched by the Seaport Museum, was pivotal in these preservation efforts, but the relaunch of their 2019 capital campaign is vital to more long-term improvements.

"After 33 years, her lipstick is starting to slide. ... The closer you get, the more the lipstick is sliding," Orlando says. "We take very good care of her, but it's just through time that she's showing these things."

One of the main refurbishments needed is a replacement of the vinyl house siding with sturdier composites designed specifically for lighthouses, which should help Bug Light stand for another 70 years or more. If the Seaport Museum can secure the funds (estimated around $1.5 million but not confirmed) and the same team of local tradesmen that rebuilt the lighthouse in 1990, the project is expected to be completed by September 2024.

"She's (Bug Light) asked nothing of us, and that's because of the talented people that gave her back to us," Orlando says. "We're looking for the same group of guys to get involved again and the same people that were helping us last time with the materials — we think we're going to put the band back together. It takes a village, and we're going to need this village once again."

The Festival

The Maritime Festival — which many mistakenly credit to the Village of Greenport or Business Improvement District — is the Seaport Museum's massive annual event and main source of revenue. This year it kicks off with the exclusive Land & Sea Gala on Friday, August 23, which then leads to the main family event September 24–25.

Those who missed their chance to explore the full-scale replica of the 17th-century Tall Ship of Delaware, Kalmar Nyckel, may be excited to hear that the Tall Ship Amistad will be docked and ready to explore throughout the weekend. The Roving Sea Shanty Singers will perform and educate, classic vessels will be on view along the waterfront, Irish Step Dancers will perform, the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary will live music and there will be wine and beer tastings, food trucks and craft vendors, and more.

The Seaport Museum is inviting parade enthusiast to dress up as mermaids, pirates and other maritime characters for the 2022 Merry Merfolk Parade. The parade offers awards for best costume in various categories, and while participation is free, registration is mandatory. The 33rd annual Maritime Festival's grand marshals are Elizabeth Peeples and Stefanie Bassett, co-owners of Little Ram Oyster Co.

"This year is going to be absolutely thrilling," Orlando says. "We're really trying to get back to what our purpose and mission is, and it's all about maritime history."

DAN'S NORTH FORK

The Renaissance of Greenport

BY MARY MCGLONE

Greenport, a village that has undergone many changes, is an example of the resilience and adaptability so common on the North Fork. The village has just over 2,000 residents living within 1.2 square miles.

While Greenport has become a destination for summer visitors, it still retains its “real town” feeling, with many year-round residents and businesses. Some of the mainstays are the IGA, Burton's Books and Claudio's. The school (K-12), library, and hospital ground the community. The Main Street waterfront business district has many small shops offering local food and wine, coffee, gifts, and art.

Mitchell Park, on the Peconic Bay, is a great place to watch the ferry to Shelter Island or take in a sunset. Its main draw is the historic carousel, built in 1920, with beautifully hand-carved and painted horses ($2.50/ride, daily in season, weekends all year).

Mitchell Park houses a rare camera obscura, one of only five in the U.S. and 50 in the world. These were popular attractions before the advent of photography. A small opening in a dark room lets in light that is reflected in a rotating mirror, enhancing the scenic beauty of the outside world.

In the winter, an outdoor ice rink offers ice skating and lessons. (Mitchell Park: 631-477-2200)

Greenport was a major whaling port from 1795-1859, as well as an active shipbuilding port. The village was long an active fishing area, especially renowned for its oysters. The Long Island Rail Road arrived in 1844. In the early 1900s, with the decline in oystering, Greenport turned to tourism. Perhaps its grit is a remnant of its bootlegging days during Prohibition. Greenport is still known for seafaring, fishing and boating.

By the 1990s, Greenport had become a little “rough around the edges,” overlooked by tourists, with some empty storefronts. Now, Greenport is a bustling destination, with 11 hotels/motels, three B&Bs and two campgrounds. The village has many restaurants offering local seafood and wine. Art galleries enliven the village. The historic district has been defined and revived, with many 19th-century wooden houses and storefronts renovated to reveal their original beauty. The historic core dates to the 18th century.

Greenport's renaissance has been buoyed by the influx of artists and art galleries. The village hosts First Friday Gallery Walks from June to December. Art galleries open their doors and colorful artwork lines the streets.

There are many activities for children — and the child in all of us. In addition to the carousel and boat-watching in Mitchell Park, there is miniature golf and ice cream (Drossos Motel — Tick Tock Miniature Golf, 477-1334) and a movie theater on Front Street.

Greenport has long been among the most diverse villages on the North Fork. It has a long-established Black community, and immigrants come from Guatemala, Colombia, Greece and Mexico. The village has seven different houses of worship in its small area. This vibrant diversity adds to the village's welcoming feeling.

Cathy Demeroto says, “Greenport is a beautiful and unique community enhanced by the diversity of its residents. This makes Greenport a wonderful and welcoming place to live, work and play.”

Greenport celebrates its seafaring past with the popular Maritime Festival every September. A Land and Sea cocktail party kicks off the weekend of parades, classic wooden boats, kayak races, wood carving, and food vendors. The event is hosted by the East End Seaport museum (eastendseaport.org).

Shellabration is a restaurant walk of local shellfish, wine, and beer in early December (shellabration.li).

Like all of the North Fork, the natural beauty of the area is part of Greenport. Inlet Pond County Park and Arshamomaque Preserve offer birdwatching and hiking. Bicycling is popular on the roads around the village.

As part of Southold Town, Greenport's residents are served by several community organizations, including Southold Town Senior Services (298-4460) and CAST (Community Action Southold Town, 631-477-1717). CAST — whose motto is “Neighbors Helping Neighbors” — seeks to build a thriving community where every member is free from worry about basic necessities and able to build a better future for themselves and their families.

Cathy Demeroto, executive director, notes that the rising cost of living has hurt local workers. “Many of our clients are the backbone of the local economy, often working at lower wage jobs that support the agriculture, hospitality and tourism industries.”

The generosity of the local community was especially evident during the pandemic. Demeroto notes that many people and businesses offered to volunteer and provide meals and financial support.

CAST has an ongoing school supply drive, for donors interested in helping make Greenport an even better place to live.

DAN'S NORTH FORK

A Wine Empire Grows on the North Fork

BY BERNADETTE STARZEE

Nothing beats summer and fall on the East End of Long Island, says Randy Frankel, one of the North Fork wine country's newest and increasingly important players. His love for the area and his appreciation for the quality of the wines has led Frankel to develop a burgeoning wine empire here.

Frankel first entered the market in 2017, when he and his wife, Barbara, purchased Shinn Estate Vineyards in Mattituck, later rechristening it Rose Hill Vineyards & Inn. Next, the Frankels became the majority partner at Croteaux Vineyards in Southold in 2019.

Last year, the Frankels purchased the three-parcel, 66-acre Ruland farm property in Mattituck and are preparing to turn it into what Frankel says will be the "most beautiful vineyard on the North Fork."

"It's been a working farm for hundreds of years, producing potatoes, winter wheat and sod. Hopefully for the next 60 or 70 years, it will be a beautiful vineyard," he said. "It's a big property, and I planted 70,000 vines from Northern California. There are 12 different varietals, and they were transported on a refrigerated 18-wheeler. They're in the ground, and we're 36 months away from our first harvest."

Frankel, who purchased the historic estate from the Ruland family, has also been focusing on preserving the farmhouse, which dates to the early 18th century.

"I told Mrs. Ruland when I bought it, that I had no intention of taking down the house," he said. "I'm a history buff, and I couldn't sleep at night if I did that. I said no matter what it costs, I would jack the house up and redo the foundation under it to keep it as preserved as possible. Ninety percent of the work is behind me, and I'm looking forward to having the Rulands back over when it's completed."

Frankel's aspirations for the property include adding a wine production facility and tasting room.

The wine business is a recent pursuit for Frankel, who describes himself as a "sports guy." A former Goldman Sachs managing director, he is a part-owner of the Tampa Bay Rays baseball team and the majority owner of four soccer teams in Europe.

"Owning a vineyard was something I really wanted to do. I was looking to buy one out in Napa [California], but it's three time zones and six hours away," he said. "I had bought a home on the South Fork, and I didn't know much about what was going on in the North Fork until I visited and saw the quality of the wines. I thought this was a better fit, since it's just 35 minutes from my Water Mill home."

Frankel spends part of the year in Florida and the Bahamas and travels to Europe in connection with his soccer teams, but he has increasingly spent time on the East End to tend to his expanding wine empire.

Croteaux has a distinct vibe, he said.

"It has a barn that was built in 1749, before we were even a country, and you enter this courtyard with a weeping cherry tree and you hear music that you never usually hear," he said. "It's a very chill place to go." Croteaux produces rosés exclusively, with nine varieties.

Approaching Rose Hill from Oregon Road, "you feel like you're on the Silverado trail in Napa Valley," Frankel said. "It's hard to believe you're less than two hours away from 8 million people." The property's location about a mile off the main road adds to its "off-the-beaten-path" feel. Rose Hill includes an inn with four guest rooms, an outdoor patio and seating next to the vines. Its so-called Library Tasting Room was recently redone with a bar from a London pub, circa 1921.

The wine business is a family affair for the Frankels. The couple's daughter Chelsea started running Rose Hill about six months after the purchase, and their daughter Amanda runs Croteaux.

With several family members working in the business, "the dinner table might not be as fun as it used to be," Frankel said. "But we hammer out any business problems, drink some good wine and by the time we get to dessert we're through it."

Southold Social's New Cocktail, The Monk's Elixir, Named for Carthusian Monks

BY CJ ARLOTTA

What many people don't know about Chartreuse is that the Carthusian monks have made it since 1737. (Yes, you read that right.) Named after the monks' Grande Chartreuse monastery, located in the Chartreuse Mountains, the French herbal liqueur is made from more than 100 herbs and other plants — precisely the flavor profile one Southold bar manager was looking for when developing a new cocktail.

"When I looked through our liquor cellar for what I could use in our next specialty cocktail and came across the bottle of Chartreuse, I was immediately transported to the [Grande Chartreuse monastery] and came up with the name The Monk's Elixir," says Helen Cruz, bar manager at Southold Social, a Southold-situated restaurant developed by François Payard, a third-generation French pastry chef. "We design our cocktails based on a lot of factors, including that we want to have a spectrum of liquor bases on our list, a spectrum of glassware, and a spectrum of color. This was going to be a vodka-based drink served in a martini glass, but we wanted it to be more herbaceous than floral."

The cocktail's ingredients include vodka, Chartreuse, lemon, simple syrup, and cranberry juice.

"This drink is light and herbaceous, with a balance of sweetness and acidity," she tells guests.

To make The Monk's Elixir, start by chilling a martini glass. Then pour the vodka and Chartreuse, and add a dash of lemon, simple syrup, and cranberry juice over ice. Shake vigorously and strain into the glass. Garnish with a wide-ribbon lemon twist.

"Unlike many specialty cocktails which tend to be quite sweet, The Monk's Elixir is pleasing to most audiences due to its neutrality and well-balanced tastes," says Cruz.

Southold Social is located at 56125 Main Road, Southold. It can be reached at southoldsocial.com or 631-765-8888.

FREDERICO AZEVEDO

CEO, FOUNDER, AND LANDSCAPE DESIGNER UNLIMITED EARTH CARE

What has been your best moment in business?

There have been many important moments over the years. The publishing and success of my book, "Bloom: The Luminous Gardens of Frederico Azevedo" represented over two decades of my career, and was an opportunity to reflect on my process and on natural design as a medium. The opening of The Garden Market is an important piece of the Unlimited Earth Care story because I'm now able to share the elements of a sustainable UEC garden.

What is your secret to success?

I'm very thankful and I work very hard. I'm at the office every day before 7am, and I consider every detail of both the business and the design side of my firm to be equally important. I create tailored natural experiences for every client, so I commit to taking the time to really plan out a design that will not only look beautiful on their property, but also be healthy and sustainable.

Who inspires you?

The Brazilian designers Lota de Macedo Soares and Roberto Burle Marx inspired me to do what I do by showing me how transformative well-designed natural spaces can be. My mentor when I studied in England, the late Robin Williams, remains an important figure in my work. I'm also inspired of course, by nature, who I collaborate with daily to create atmospheres and spaces that are equal parts its wild influence and my careful planning.

ISAAC BOOTS

CELEBRITY TRAINER, CHOREOGRAPHER,

Astonishingly, Boots' effort raised over $1.5 Million for No Kid Hungry, making him the single largest individual fundraiser in the organization's history.

Boots' new $1 Million fundraising effort is for the World Childhood Foundation. They focus on protecting children from sex exploitation, violence and sexual abuse.

Boots has trained and worked with superstars in TV/Film, Broadway & music, including Gwyneth Paltrow, Jessica Chastain, Kelly Ripa, Vanessa Hudgens, Lisa Rinna, Ariana Grande, Priyanka Chopra, Naomi Watts, Brooke Shields, Lucy Liu, and Faye Dunaway to name a few.

My best moment in business has been the ability to adapt to different situations that arise and learn from each and every one of them.

What is your secret to success?

My secret to success is to never stop reaching higher, and to never let a day go by without learning something.

Who inspires you?

My inspiration comes from my family, my parents worked hard for what they wanted each and every day.

- 443 cases of defendants with outstanding warrants on pending cases charging violations of Section 230.00 (prostitution) and related charges.

What is your secret to success?

Whatever the situation, you must be ready to take on new responsibilities. This will set you apart from your peers.

Who inspires you?

She dedicated her life to helping those less fortunate, and I'd like to achieve a similar story when I look back on my life. One of my favorite quotes by her is, "Do not go where the path may lead. Go instead where there is no path and leave a trail."

CHRISTOPHER J. CHIMERI

PARTNER
QUATELA CHIMERI PLLC

What has been your best moment in business?

While many moments come to mind, my proudest is when I stepped into a terribly contentious case that had gone on for many years before my involvement. Working in concern with the client, we achieved his goals.

What is your secret to success?

Success – when properly defined in the context of a family law practice – is no secret. It requires equal parts attention to detail, putting in the time to get to know your clients, and using all efforts and resources available to both shape and achieve a client's goals.

Who inspires you?

I have many inspirations. Going back to my childhood, my parents were each instrumental in shaping my values. My wrestling coaches prepared me for hard work and how to face adversity. Finally, the team at QC and their dedication to what we do.

CHRIS COFFEE

SAGE & MADISON

Chris Coffee grew up believing classic beauty is meant to be intertwined with everyday life, always happiest when creating visual concepts over a vast array of mediums, whether on the classical ballet stage, producing some of NYFW's most attended runway shows, working as an innovator in the cosmetics industry, or designing his clients' homes. Chris' desire and eagerness to create is unwavering and continues to fuel his projects today. Chris believes that some things are better shared, "Living in the village I walked by 31 Madison always with a curiosity to learn more and seek further. I knew the property was special with a lot of history and knew it needed to be more open and shared with residents and visitors alike. Being an entrepreneur has always been at my roots but being an entrepreneur that can share with others is at my core."

JUSTIN CORTES

CHIEF OF STAFF/SENIOR ADVISOR
OFFICE OF BRONX BOROUGH PRESIDENT

What has been your best moment in business?

My best moment in business is winning a seat and making HERstory. Knowing that we ran a campaign for 2 years during a pandemic when no one thought we could win nor wanted to support us. You aren't counted out, God says when you're done. When you stay the course you will always make it to the finish line.

What is your secret to success?

- 1 – Faith in knowing that God will always provide.
- 2 – Positivity and grit above all and knowing that I am destined for greatness.
- 3 – Leading with respect, love and empathy.

What inspires you?

My parents and my faith. I believe that we are all born with the purpose to affect change. We are given our parents for a reason. Good or bad, they guide us to our better selves. I was blessed with two strong parents who strived to ensure that my siblings and I had what we needed growing up.

JASON BACHMAN & JOHN DIAS

POWER COUPLE
CRUNCH GYM & CBS NEW YORK
PERSONAL TRAINER & REPORTER, WCBS-TV NEW YORK

JASON BACHMAN

What has been your best moment in business?

Being a personal trainer, my clients typically come to me with goals in mind. When a client achieves those goals, it's not only a huge success for them, but for me as well!

What is your secret to success?

My secret to success is to always be authentic. Authenticity is the key to connection with my clients. It creates a bond that propels us both toward success!

Who inspires you?

I am inspired by my husband. His work ethic motivates me everyday to be better. I've learned so much from him.

JOHN DIAS

What has been your best moment in business?

Flying with the Blue Angels! It was like hitting the lottery being able to go in one of their jets. We hit Zero G, so I was floating like an astronaut.

What is your secret to success?

Hard work and dedication. Every morning I wake up ready to take on the day and give it my all. My hours are odd, so if I'm not falling asleep by mid-day, I can get a lot done in one day.

Who inspires you?

My late father. He died almost 4 years ago and there isn't a day that goes by that I don't think about him. He never graduated from college, and worked so hard to make sure my sister and I were able to get the best education possible. He never passed up an opportunity to tell me how proud he was of me, and I never want to let him down.

Who inspires you?

I'm inspired by the generation of local business owners that have built their companies and withstood the test of time in the Hamptons.

ELENA GIBBS

REAL ESTATE AGENT
SOTHEBY'S INTERNATIONAL REALTY

What has been your best moment in business?

The best moment in my career was when I began working with The Bodenchak Team from the Bridgehampton Sotheby's International Realty office.

While I have been building my practice individually, I now have the ability to partner on deals with one of the top-ranked Sotheby's teams in the Hamptons and the country.

What is your secret to success?

My secret to success is my commitment to assist people with one of the biggest financial and emotional decisions of their lives: buying or selling their Hamptons home. My background in social work provides the foundation to help clients navigate the emotions of real estate transactions.

Who inspires you?

My inspiration comes from the people who give back to their community. The philanthropist, Jean Shafiroff, states that philanthropy is not only about the money you give, but the time, commitment, and passion you bring. This lesson inspired me to join the committees of The Southampton Animal Shelter Foundation and the Ellen Hermanson Foundation.

Emily recently launched Bolton-St. Johns' Washington, D.C., practice. Widely known as a strong advocate and champion for progressive causes, Emily has a proven track record of moving New York forward. The New York Times has described Emily as "one of the best-connected and most popular lobbyists at City Hall and in Albany."

Emily's expertise and insight into government and politics has led to landmark legislative successes. As the lead lobbyist for LGBTQ rights coalitions, Emily was instrumental in the passage of New York's Marriage Equality Act in 2011. Her efforts were key in achieving the legalization of gestational surrogacy in 2020.

A lifelong New Yorker, Emily is a prominent operative in the New York Democratic Party. AARON GOLDSCHMIDT

FOUNDER & DIRECTOR SHINE CAMP

What has been your best moment in business?

Recently, I opened the Shine Studio in Bridgehampton, a process and creative arts space for kids. Shine has always been a mobile, pop-up business. Building out and designing my dream space has been a highlight of my career. But also, I think it was pretty momentous when I made the leap to start my camp out here in 2014. I decided to take that leap with no safety net and fulfill a need in myself and the East End community. 8 years later, I would say it paid off.

What is your secret to success?

Trusting my instincts, taking risks, and finding a balance between work life and my personal life.

Who inspires you?

I am inspired daily by the kids I teach. Being able to see the world through the eyes of children helps to keep me in check and remind me of what's truly important.

MARK MASONE

OWNER & CEO
DESIGNS BY MARK MASONE

What has been your best moment in business?

I could not say that I have a "Best Moment" when in fact I've been able to travel the world, be apart of some of the most monumental parts of history, meet some of the most incredible individuals and have created friendships that have lasted for decades. So to be honest owning my own company and starting this business has been the best decision I could ever made.

What is your secret to success?

The secret to my 30+ years of success has been my personality and the fact that my company runs on personal experience between myself and my client directly. I truly enjoy working hand in hand with my clients from the moment they call my shop to the end of the night of their event. Making my clients dreams a reality is what has put me on the map!

Who inspires you?

To be honest this questions was hard to answer with so many individuals..

With that being said, my two children Justin and Olivia and their Mother Liza are truly my inspiration. They have been by my side and along for the ride through Hurricane Sandy, 911 and picking up and moving from Nassau County to The Hamptons. They've have always been apart of every aspect of my company.

My best moment in business was helping to lead the community through the COVID-19 pandemic, whether it was getting essential goods into the community like masks, hand sanitizer, and OTC medications, to vaccinating members of the community right in Sag Harbor.

Westhampton Beach Dining, NoFoDoCo Explosion & More

MANNA AT LOBSTER INN CHEF THOMAS BOGIA

BY HARRY POWERS

We wanted to like this Endive Salad picture more than once after we saw it posted on Manna at Lobster Inn's Instagram page, but we'll settle with the recipe from Chef Tom Bogia instead. Try it out after you read this week's East End foodie news bites.

This year, there was a spate of new restaurant openings in Westhampton Beach, which might just be becoming the best Hampton out west! In the old Star Boggs spot, Fauna serves American cuisine on their seasonally-changing menu. Favorites include the roasted red pepper gnudi with foraged mushrooms, curly kale, black truffle cream and pistachio. The menu also pays homage to Boggs by serving his favorite dish, almond flounder, served over whipped sweet potato, with asparagus, rum-glazed banana and citrus beurre blanc.

Chef Laurent Tourondel, perhaps more known by his initials LT, expanded his iconic Sag Harbor burger joint, LT Burger, to Westhampton Beach. The same tasty burgers, fries and shakes can be enjoyed there and clued-in diners also know that the Kobe hot dogs are second to none.

If you're in Westhampton and crave Hawaiian fare, visit Ivy on Main and if you seek fish, John Scott's Surf Shack has your back.

Speaking of restaurant debuts, Leon 1909 opened their doors earlier this month on Shelter Island, sling-ing plates to lively crowds night after night. It's named after co-owner Valerie Mnuchin's paternal grandfather, whose affinity for romantic European adventures and seaside destinations inform the restaurant's ambiance. A wood-burning hearth at the heart of the restaurant serves as its anchor, inspiring a Provençal-style menu showcasing regional ingredients. Favorites include the skewered shrimp and crab gougeres, and ribeye dressed in a Moroccan spiced chermoula.

During the height of the pandemic, food pantries were overwhelmed by the amount of people that needed their assistance. This problem prompted Slow Food East End, a local non-profit organization, to engage with approximately 40 volunteer bakers and donate more than 700 loaves of bread to local food pantries. The bakers make four loaves, keeping one and donating the remaining three. The group intends to double their dough output this year and work with more pantries in the area. Thank you Slow Food East End for doing your part (and more) in combatting food insecurity on the East End and introducing people to the joys of baking.

To quote the enlightened philosopher Neil Young, "live music is better." The newly-minted Springs Tavern & Grill has announced that they will host the Lynn Blue Band on Thursday, September 1 from 7-9 p.m. Enjoy great Van Morrison and Elvis Costello covers while noshing on menu items such as crispy calamari, tortellini alla bolognese and skirt steak. Be sure to look at the walls, which feature artwork from iconic East End artists such as Jackson Pollock, Lee Krasner and Willem de Kooning. In fact, owner Alex Rossi studied Pollock extensively while studying to get his art history major.

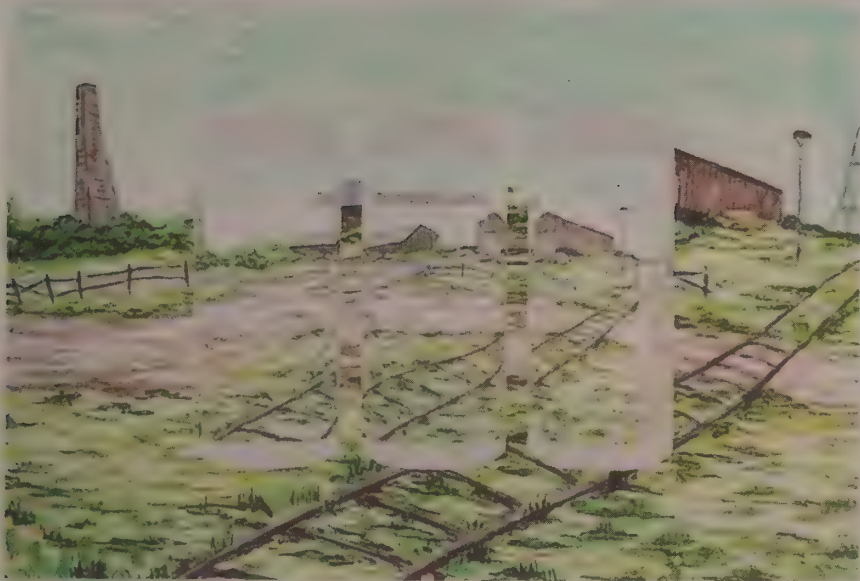

There was a small gas-related explosion in the building where North Fork Doughnut Co.'s kitchen operates earlier this month. Thankfully no one was hurt by it, but the explosion has halted doughnut production and closed NoFoDoCo's stores in Mattituck and Bay Shore for the time being. You can support NoFoDoCo during this trying time for their family and business by buying their merch and gift cards online.

Something to Wine About: 2019 DAOU Soul of a Lion

BY LINDA DELMONICO PRUSSEN

Sometimes you need a reason to splurge on a wine, and other times the wine IS the reason to splurge. This wine is the latter. The 2019 DAOU Soul of a Lion Cabernet Sauvignon is a wine that, once tasted, is not forgotten. The 2019 DAOU Soul of a Lion will seduce you with a rich, dark berry nose; silky smooth tannins; a lovely, luxurious mouth feel; and layered flavors of dark, brambly fruit, grilled cherry, toast and faint notes of almond and black licorice.

The Soul of a Lion was created as a tribute to Daou family Patriarch, Joseph Daou. According to his family, Joseph Daou exhibited the strength and courage seen in the king of the jungle. He proudly instilled these traits in his sons. On his DAOU Mountain visit, he listened to his son's winemaking dream and gave them his blessing. Soul of a Lion is a testament to that moment, a tribute to the man and fitting to the father.

Depending on your wine budget, you may, at $170

a bottle, consider this a luxury or a gift wine rather than an everyday wine. Then again, once you've had it, you may very well change your wine budget. This is definitely the kind of wine that helps one realize how Johnny Depp and a few other celebrities might let their wine budgets get a bit higher than expected. Then again, a dinner for two at a steakhouse can easily top $300.

Speaking of steak, while this wine would pair effortlessly with filet mignon as well as nearly any high-end meat dish, one could always order pizza and enjoy it with Soul of a Lion instead. Eat cheap, drink exceptionally well.

DAOU Vineyards was started to create world-class Bordeaux-style wines in the United States. It was founded by brothers Daniel and George Daou in 2007 in the Paso Robles region of California a region known primarily for outstanding Zinfandels.

The Weekly Winedown

with Six Corners

Breaking Biodynamic

By: Liz from Six Corners Fine Wines & Spirits

You may have noticed a bunch of icons on the label of your wine bottles and wondered, what the heck does all this mean? There are a lot of certifications out there for wines such as organic, all-natural, sustainable and biodynamic just to name a few. We're not going to get into ALL of the certifications here, we're just going to discuss what it takes for a wine to become certified Biodynamic.

According to the Biodynamic Farming and Gardening Association the official definition of Biodynamic farming is, "a spiritual-ethical-ecological approach to agriculture, gardens, food production and nutrition." Another way to say it would be a set of farming practices that views the farm, or vineyard in this case, as one organism. Every part of the farm has an effect upon all of the other parts, just as its own ecosystem.

The first person to approach agriculture in this way was Austrian Philosopher Rudolf Steiner in the 1920's. Steiner argued that the best agricultural practices utilized science, astrology and the lunar calendar. Typical farming tasks such as planting, pruning and harvesting are all to be done on days specified by the Biodynamic Calendar.

Devised by the high priestess of biodynamics, Maria Thun, the Biodynamic calendar is divided into four categories: Root, Fruit, Flower and Leaf. These four categories represent the four classical elements: Earth, Air, Fire, and Water. Fruit Days are the best for harvesting grapes. Root days are the best days to prune while leaf days are the best to water. On flower days the farm or vineyard is supposed to be left alone. Harvesting on incorrect days or times can lead to devastating consequences such as water-logged grapes if picked on a leaf day.

Besides adhering to the calendar, another important component to being Biodynamic is having a wide variety of animal and plant life within your system. Keeping cows to fertilize the grass and sheep to keep the pests out are examples of having a range of biodiversity. Growing marigolds or citronella are excellent ways to keep the bugs away. Also, your farm or vineyard MUST be clear of artificial substances. Chemicals used in fertilizers and pesticides are strictly prohibited; rather, natural materials, composts and soils are utilized instead. This keeps the soil fertile and able to provide nutritional benefits to the plants growing within it.

True Biodynamic agriculture actually REQUIRES a special compost treatment that is going to sound a little wacky, but remember it is a requirement. Cow horns need to be stuffed with compost and then buried all winter long. Once Spring arrives the horns are excavated, and the compost is spread throughout the whole vineyard. This practice may sound like a bunch of mumbo-jumbo but there is some science to it. For example, it aids the regulation of the soil's pH, stimulates microbial activity as well as seed germination and dissolves unwanted minerals. Some believe the Cow horn was used because throughout history it has been a symbol for abundance, however there is no true explanation.

There are nine other compost preparations used in Biodynamic farming that include using yarrow blossoms, chamomile, and/or stinging nettles.

The benefits of Biodynamic agriculture are abundant. Non-organic soils tend to be more compacted, have more diseases, and less organic material. Biodynamic soils, like the farms are teaming with life and nutrients. That old adage that said to leave the land in as good or better shape that you found it for the future generations, well, that is the mantra and a pretty darn good way of explaining what it means to be Biodynamic.

DAN'S TAKE: FOOD & DRINK

New Menu, New Name, New Era at The Suffolk in Riverhead

THREE APPS

BOARDS AND DUMPLINGS

DESSERTS

BY OLIVER PETERSON

After closing their kitchen at the start of this year, the Suffolk Theater — newly branded as The Suffolk — has a fully revamped and excitingly inventive new food program to go with their updated name.

The changes come as part of Executive Director Gary Hygom's broader vision for the performing arts venue, which includes more diverse programming and an emphasis on supporting restaurants and businesses in the surrounding community.

While he did shut down the kitchen soon after taking the reins at The Suffolk, Hygom says reopening with a more well-considered program was always part of the plan. "We didn't know what the menu would be, we didn't know who would be preparing it, but we knew that it was inevitable," he explains, noting that it took some time, but they decided a few months ago that the food should continue to be prepared in-house.

To make that happen, Hygom hired Cassandra Dotzel as food and beverage director and Tara Siegmund as kitchen supervisor. "She has really done amazing things," he says, pointing out that Dotzel and Siegmund created a brand-new menu, and overhauled the bar with much higher quality liquor, an expanded wine list and unique specialty cocktails for every show — all while redesigning how both the kitchen and bar function.

Dotzel also worked with a baker to come up with some incredible desserts, made specifically for The Suffolk.

"I think now we have a little bit of something for everyone," Hygom says. "We had a little bit of a soft opening for about the past three weeks, tweaking and changing, and now we think we're kind of locked in," he adds, acknowledging that there will always be new additions and changes over time, but the core menu is right on target. "Right now, this is the menu that we've gotten the best response from, and the great thing is, it's there to complement," Hygom says.

"You can go there and have a cheese board and a couple glasses of wine, and after a show go out to dinner. You can go to dinner and come and have dessert at the theater," he continues, noting that the goal has always been to help generate business in downtown Riverhead and its restaurants, "so that we do what performing arts centers are supposed to do," which is to generate business for everyone in their vicinity.

"The thing that I love about it is, The Suffolk is probably the hippest venue I have been in, and this (new food and bar program) makes the experience more full and well-rounded. It's a great one-stop venue," Hygom says. "I've got to say, so far, so good."

Perhaps most interesting, and smart, among the many changes, is the way food is served and how people eat it. Hygom points out that a venue like The Suffolk could seat 60 people one night and 500 on another, and it's imperative, no matter how many are eating, that food goes out quickly without quality suffering. At the same time, they had to consider the fact that guests aren't always at tables.

"Sometimes we do some seated sections that are just rows of chairs," he says. "All of these menu items are adaptable for those."

To make eating convenient for everyone, Dotzel made it so each item can be served in a bamboo cone, which is filled with offerings such as cheese, meats, French fries, mini empanadas, pan-fried dumplings, coconut shrimp and even desserts, like "funnel fries" topped with powdered sugar, caramel and chocolate sauce. "You can actually get food and hold it in one hand and pick at it," Hygom says. "So it kind of takes that cool, to-go idea to a different level with this, that makes it available to people who are without a table."

"We have worked to create a simple menu to ensure great service while attending our shows," Dotzel says. "We didn't want 'simple' to lack flair though! We are continuing to add some items into the fall and we are so excited about our special, locally hand-crafted desserts."

Hygom adds that, along with the new food and the innovative way it's served, they're trying to "modernize" with QR codes at every table, so guests can pull up a menu with a swipe of their phone. "We have a new system coming in shortly where they will be able to actually order from their phones from the table, so it will make it that much faster and more efficient as well," he says, though servers will always be on hand.

As for the new name, changing the Suffolk Theater to The Suffolk, "I talked to the owners and we came to a consensus that 'theater' didn't fit with who we are. Because when people think of a theater, people think of bolted down, fold-down theater seats, and that environment. We are much cooler than that," Hygom says, explaining that they are adding more standing-room-only shows targeting "a very different demographic," with club-like acts and performances.

"I think it evokes kind of a cooler vibe, which is what we're striving for and what the room is," he adds, pointing out that the marquee already says, simply, "Suffolk" without the word "Theater" anywhere on it, "so it's perfect."

Visit suffolktheater.com to see everything on the new menu and a list of upcoming shows at The Suffolk, 118 East Main Street, Riverhead.

New Yorkers can have an energy future that is clean and affordable

National Grid's plans for a fossil-free future are providing a blueprint for New York to benefit from clean energy that is affordable, reliable, and preserves customer choice.

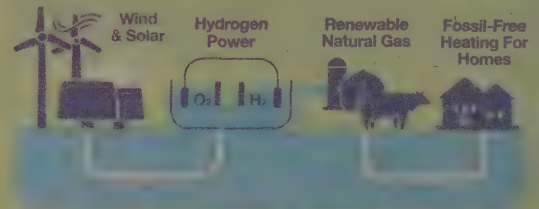

New and innovative technologies mean we can use our existing electric and gas infrastructure to deliver fossil-free fuels, like renewable natural gas and green hydrogen, that will be affordable and reliable for every customer. Best of all, we will meet our net zero carbon emissions goals by achieving key climate milestones along the way.

Using green hydrogen, which we will produce from water using wind power, or renewable natural gas, which is produced by recycling waste, we will build a cleaner and more affordable energy future that saves our environment.

To learn more, visit nationalgrid.com/fossilfree

Green Hydrogen and Renewable Natural Gas

By using green hydrogen and renewable natural gas—backed up by more and more wind and solar power, battery storage, and greater energy efficiency—we will make our National Grid system carbon neutral by 2050, with important milestones reached all along the way.

The Amazing 2022 Artists & Writers Charity Softball Game

ANNOUNCERS JULIET PAPA AND JOSH BRANDMAN

BY DAN RATTINER

I have been a baseball fan all my life. But this past Saturday, I witnessed the most remarkable thing I have ever seen on a baseball diamond. Ever.

It happened in the bottom of the ninth inning of the East Hampton Artist & Writers Charity Softball Game, an encounter between members of those two professions in the Hamptons that has been played annually for 74 years.

On my way to the game, to umpire and/or write about it, I thought of something interesting. "Can the pen be mightier than the paintbrush?" Hmmm.

We'd soon know. I parked in the lot adjacent to the Herrick Park ball field, behind the Stop & Shop in East Hampton, went in and saw the place was alive with spectators and players talking to President Bill Clinton there at the game, surrounded by well-wishers.

He was to call balls and strikes on the mound from behind the pitcher. And he was sartorially very splendid. Panama hat, big smile, some sort of Hawaiian shirt with squiggles, black shorts, long socks and sneakers.

Well, he's retired. And just one of the many celebrities and people of accomplishment who have played in this annual game over the years, both retired or otherwise.

I sat down behind the backstop at the media table where Juliet Papa of 1010 WINS "All News. All the Time." was at the microphone announcing the game along with Josh Brandman, whose dad David sometimes plays in the game.

And so, with the former president umpiring from behind the mound, the game began.

There were the usual diving catches in the outfield, the usual double plays from third to second to first. And there were the home runs.

Graphic designer Brian Pfund hit a grand slam. Musician Eddie McCarthy hit another.

After that, an ambulance arrived in the outfield where, it turned out, essayist Andy Friedman playing center field for the Writers had leaped up to snag McCarthy's grand slam, failed to get it, and then fell into the grass where, somehow, he received a cut on his chin requiring medical attention.

Taken to the hospital, he got four stitches, and was back at the game in time to watch the extraordinary things that happened in the bottom of the ninth inning.

By that time, some of the crowd, with the game almost over, had gone home. It was a hot, sunny day. Furthermore, this was not a close game. Indeed it was sort of a slaughter. The score was Artists 18, Writers 2.

Well, as the teams changed sides to go from the top of the ninth to the bottom of the ninth, the Writers talked about trying to bring on some kind of rally, just to show they were there and holding up their end, at least a little bit.

"Three outs and it's over," Brandman said over the microphone.

Comedian Peter Cestaro was pitching for the Artists. This is a slow-pitch softball game, with the batters given lots of opportunities, given the pitch, to hit it far, if they were able.

The inning opened with Mike Lupica, the sports-writer, getting a walk, after which, his son, Alex Lupica singled to right field.

Writer David Baer, who in prior years has been the player of the game, then hit a double, scoring both Lupicas. It was now 18-4.

Next up was Jerry Xie, who hit a single through the legs of the second baseman.

Writer Dan Pulick now singled followed by Jonathan Lemire with another, and now it was 18-6. (Lemire's book The Big Lie is currently No. 4 on The New York Times bestsellers list.)

"Hey," Brandman at the microphone said, "there's still nobody out. How far will this go?"

Writer Nicholas Dawidoff now singled to load the bases. Novelist Peter Wood singled, producer Harry Javer walked and it was 18-8.

Then writer Paul Winum, at bat, got hit by a pitch. He groaned and grasped his side, but this is slow-pitch and he was faking. He came back to the plate, smiled, and then dropped a single over the shortstop's head to make it 18-9 with the bases still loaded.

Was this really happening? Spectators talked to one another about what until now seemed impossible. Indeed, a pinch hitter nobody knew came up and walked, sending in another run.

Nobody knew who this person was because nearly all the players wore shirts with their names on the back. This guy's shirt had no name.

Somehow at this point, a 10-year-old in a red T-shirt came up to the plate and hit a single. And once again the bases were loaded. And the 10-year-old was replaced by a runner.

"There's STILL nobody out," Brandman shouted.

Next, after Writer David Bernstein hit a triple, the Artists decided to bring in a new pitcher. In trotted photographer David Blinken. It did no good at first. Screenwriter Rob Levi singled and now it was 18-13.

By this time, everybody knew they were seeing something never to be forgotten. But suddenly, Blinken got the next two outs. Xie, at bat, hit a high fly ball to left field which was caught, and then Pulick hit a fly ball to right which was also caught.

When the next batter came up and hit another slow bouncer to the second baseman, people thought that was it. But again, the ball was bobbled, and the resultant flip to second again appeared to be too late.

Nevertheless, the Artists on the sidelines raced out onto the infield, yelling "game over," and "we won," after which Carl Bernstein, of Watergate fame, who was coaching first base for the Writers, ran out and yelled at everybody that the runner was safe.

Indeed, two umpires confirmed it.

During this, I thought one of the infielders shouted at the Artists, "Do you really want to win this game like that?" and the dust settled.

The game continued. Dawidoff singled, more walks and singles followed and it was 18-15.

Again, the Artists announced they would be changing pitchers.

In came Artist John Longmire, a big, strong athlete who had started the game keeping the Writers at bay. He would put out this fire. But no. The Writers objected.

There's a rule that allows players who play early and then get replaced to come back and hit again. But pitching was another story, they said, and it wasn't fair, so Longmire, after standing around with the ball, walked off the field and threw it to Cestaro to finish the game.

So here's how it ended. Bases loaded, two out and another stranger who also did not have a name on his back had just taken strike two. It had come down to this. One last swing.

The pitch came in high, but the stranger swung at it, hitting a fly ball that gracefully rose up and up, then down and down to just clear the left field fence over the outstretched glove of the Artists' left fielder. The Writers had won, and they did it by scoring 17 runs in the bottom of the ninth.

As people jumped up and down for joy, I walked out onto the field where this hitter was being congratulated by everybody. Who was he?

"He's the rabbi," somebody said.

Josh Franklin is indeed the rabbi at the Jewish Center of the Hamptons and co-author of the "Hamptons Soul" column in Dan's Papers. He told me he had never played in this game before, never played much baseball, was not that good at it, and it had been a homerun but the umpires had ruled it a ground rule double, which won the game 19-18.

"God was on your side this day," I told him. After that, he was mobbed by more Writers. What a game.

Iris Apfel to Celebrate 101st Birthday with WHB Dinner & Sale

"More is more, and less is a bore." These are the words that fashion icon Iris Apfel has lived by for 100 years, and words that will undoubtedly ring true at her 101st birthday exhibition and sale in Westhampton Beach this week.

The Hampton Synagogue Children's Center, Jack's House, is hosting a luxurious dinner party for Apfel's 101st birthday on Monday, August 29 (her actual birthday) at 6 p.m. While getting to attend Apfel's birthday party is a rare and priceless opportunity, there's more to this exciting event.

Apfel is widely known for her eye-catching statement pieces — her chunky jewelry and glasses — so naturally an event celebrating Apfel would have to celebrate her iconic style as well. Beginning ahead of the dinner, at 4 p.m. on Monday, guests will be invited to peruse a preview of her legendary collection.

Once the exclusive preview is over, the items will become available twice more for exhibition and sale. The public can gaze upon Apfel's impressive collection on Tuesday, August 30 and on Wednesday, August 31, 1–5 p.m. on both days. For anyone who has ever dreamed of owning a piece from Apfel's lauded collection, this is that rare opportunity.

The event's co-chairs include Michelle Barnet, Bonnie Katz, Carol Levin, Michele Mirman, Donna Schneier, Simi Teitelbaum Schneier and Victoria Schneps. The Hampton Synagogue is led by the world-renowned Rabbi Marc Schneier.

Tickets to the dinner are $180 per person, and sponsorships, which include dinner, are available for $1,000. These donations to the Hampton Synagogue Children's Center are tax-deductible.

It's sure to be an unforgettable night honoring this magnificent woman of Jewish heritage whose sense of fashion continues to stand out from the crowd. And it's even more rewarding for guests knowing that their contributions are supporting Hampton Synagogue in their quest to become the cultural hub for families in Westhampton Beach.

The Hampton Synagogue is located at 154 Sunset Avenue, Westhampton Beach. To RSVP, call 631-288-0534 ext.10, and visit thehamptonsynagogue.org for more information.

Ask Beatty: How to Rekindle Your Sex Life

BY BEATTY COHAN,
MSW, LCSW, AASECT

Dear Beatty,

Jason and I have been married for 15 years. This is a third marriage for both of us. I am 75 years old and Jason is 87. We met on Match.com and have a really wonderful relationship. We used to have a dynamite sex life. However, since having my ovaries removed eight years ago, I have ZERO interest in sex. Although I try to sexually pleasure Jason on occasion, my lack of interest is starting to really affect our marriage. We have been arguing more about small things, when I know that our bickering is really about our sex life ... or rather, lack of. Do you have any suggestions for us?

Barbara K., Sagaponack

Dear Barbara,

The fact is that despite people's ages or stages in life, the majority of men and women's sexual desire does wane and wax for a variety of reasons. Some of these include: illness, hormonal changes, medications, relationship problems, depression, anxiety, substance abuse of various kinds, family problems, job and money worries, extramarital affairs and retirement. And although our hormones certainly effect our sex drive, there are many things that couples can do to rekindle their sex life.

When people are younger (just ask young adolescent boys and girls), their sex hormones rule their very existence, regardless of what may be going on in their young lives. The good news is that individuals and couples who are serious about wanting to improve their sex lives will be able to achieve at least some degree of success. A former patient of mine from Sarasota, Florida, learned at age 87 to give oral sex and achieve orgasms for the first time in her life!

MY SESSIONS WITH BARBARA AND JASON

Barbara and Jason made an appointment to see me in person at my East Hampton office. My first session was with Barbara and Jason together. I tried to identify any and all issues (large and small) that may be interfering with their relationship, both in and out of the bedroom. Next,

I met with both Barbara and Jason individually to see if there were any emotional, psychiatric or physical problems, including prescription and over-the-counter medications that may explain their sexual challenges. The good news was that they really loved each other and the life that they shared together. Jason was amazing. He was happy with his wife and his life and was in fairly good physical health. His only complaint was that he wanted a more active sex life.

When I met with Barbara alone, she assured me that her lack of sexual desire, including vaginal dryness was directly related to a decrease in her estrogen and progesterone levels as a result of her ovaries having been removed. She chose not to use estrogen therapy, but instead has tried to boost estrogen levels naturally with: phytoestrogen-rich foods found in plants and plant-based foods which have a similar structure to estradiol, (which is the strongest of the estrogen hormones), B vitamins, boron, black cohosh and evening primrose. Unfortunately, these remedies did not help Barbara's sex drive. In discussing the pros and cons of hormone replacement therapy, it is always best to have these discussions with your health care provider and be willing to seek out second opinions if necessary.

IGNITING THE FIRES

If we simply wait for our feelings to motivate us to try to accomplish many things in life — including losing weight, beginning a new career, finding a relationship, etc. — we might wait a lifetime for these motivational feelings to surface. Wishing, hoping and dreaming to meet our goals is insufficient. It's the decision to take action that ultimately determines whether our dreams and hopes can become a reality.

DATES FOR SEX

Barbara and Jason and myself worked out a tentative plan for the couple to begin to make dates for sex, despite the fact that Barbara had zero sex drive. Barbara reluctantly agreed to this plan, convinced that nothing would change. She agreed to be in charge of making the dates and planned to do so before our next weekly session.

WHAT WAS THE OUTCOME?

Within a few days, I received a one-word text from Barbara: "SUCCESS!!" When Jason and Barbara arrived for our next session, they were all smiles. Barbara could hardly believe how sexy she had felt, despite her trepidation. She was so excited to tell me that she had her first orgasm in almost eight years. And Jason, of course, was thrilled. I had a follow-up session with them a couple of weeks later. They told me that their weekly date for sex was working and they were both pleasantly surprised that they were able to achieve success after only a few sessions.

The names and some of the details have been changed to protect the confidentiality of my patients.

HOW TO PUT THE SIZZLE IN YOUR SEX LIFE

I hope you will join me and board-certified OBGYN, Dr. Carolyn Delucia, MD FACOG at the East Hampton Library on Saturday, August 27 from 1-2:30 p.m. Our presentation will deal with all of the things that we can do to improve our sex lives, regardless of one's age or stage in life.

Beatty Cohan, MSW, LCSW, AASECT is a nationally recognized psychotherapist, sex therapist, author of For Better for Worse Forever: Discover the Path to Lasting Love, national speaker, national radio and television expert guest and host of the weekly "Ask Beatty Show" on the Progressive Radio Network. She has a private practice in NYC and East Hampton.

Beatty would love to hear from you. You can send your questions and comments to her at BeattyCohan.msw@gmail.com. For more info, go to beattycohan.com.

SALUTE TO BRIDGEHAMPTON

The Inside Scoop On L'Epicuriste, A New Globally-Sourced Luxury Pantry Shop

BY SHARON FEIEREISEN

Bridgehampton's newest destination spot has us licking our lips

It's no secret that Hamptonites have refined palates. Locals can get the best of the best on the East End, and now, sourcing has become even easier with the opening of L'Epicuriste, a luxury, globally sourced, specialty foods store in Bridgehampton.

Offering a variety of high-quality dried goods and assorted indulgences, most of which haven't previously been accessible, L'Epicuriste has quickly become a hot spot among locals, foodies and chefs. Highlights include baskets from Ghana, uniquely flavored macarons imported directly from France, a selection of Moroccan spices, linens from Portugal, knives from Japan, one-of-a-kind objects and more.

Looking for a hostess gift? L'Epicuriste has gift baskets that are both pre-selected, as well as ones available to be custom-made. Plus, the store stocks goods and art from local artisans to take taste and flavor beyond the kitchen, including bouquets from botanical atelier Missi Flowers and artwork from local artist Sydney Albertini.

Located on Main Street in Bridgehampton, L'Epicuriste, was founded by financier turned designer Charles de Viel Castel after he found himself unable to find key and quality ingredients to cook with. We chatted with the new shop owner to find out more about his specialty store.

Can you tell us about your shop and how you came to open it?

The idea came after spending many years and much of my time in the Hamptons on the hunt for ingredients that proved difficult to find here. I started speaking with local chefs who told me that they have to order or ship their ingredients from other areas, and a lightbulb went off. While the pantry and specialty items formed the initial concept of the store, tabletop and gifting naturally followed. Along with the assortment of culinary goods, we have a selection of knives from

THE SHELVES AT L'EPICURISTE ARE STOCKED WITH HARD-TO-FIND ITEMS.

Japan, custom cutting boards, home scents and soaps, custom embroidered linens and beautiful tableware, all collected from international destinations. Our gift baskets tie all of these categories together with a bow. While it is the perfect place to pick something up for your host or hostess, our customers can't resist stocking up for themselves as well.

What's your perfect Hamptons day?

Time spent with my wife and children, a dip in the ocean at Gibson Beach, a visit to L'Epicuriste to chat with the customers, a good book by the pool in the summer or the fire in the winter, a good bottle of French red wine and a home-cooked meal with friends.

Guilty pleasure?

Dirty martini, extra dirty.

Food you can't live without?

I love a good Omakase sushi.

Food trend you love and one you hate?

I love hot peppers and anything spicy, and I hate pumpkin spice.

Can you single out some of your favorite finds from your store?

Ready Risotto with truffle from Tartuflanghe is better than most homemade risotto and it's ready in 10 minutes. Dufour Saucisson, which is an artisanal French charcuterie, reminds me of France. Have a Corn Chip from Laguna Beach California — if you know, you know — and they are so hard to find on the East Coast. They have a touch of soy and are so delicious. I have never seen an unfinished bag. I also love Yugeta's organic soy sauce because it adds such a wonderful taste to sushi or anything you cook that requires soy sauce, and we have Italian Burrata that we fly in every week. It has a short shelf life, but what a difference it makes to have it so fresh. Whether served with tomatoes, a little summer truffle or any other way it's delightful.

L'Epicuriste is located at 2466 Montauk Highway, Bridgehampton. It's open daily 10 a.m.–6 p.m. Visit lepicuriste.com for more information.

Impact the Environment Through Proper Irrigation & Water Conservation

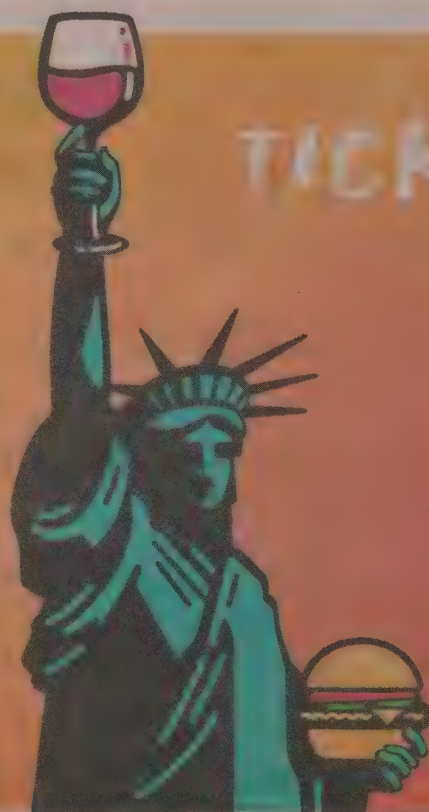

There are two irrigation technologies worth investing in to improve your irrigation system's efficiency. Conserve water, and save time and money when caring for your landscape.

Weather-based controllers – "Smart" Wi-Fi controllers adjust the irrigation schedule based on local weather conditions. These controllers self-adjust and require very little intervention when programmed correctly.

Flow meters - Since irrigation uses a lot of water, consider having an irrigation flow meter installed. Flow meters measure exactly how much water you are using at all times. Problems such as busted pipes or sprinkler geysers will quickly show up and quickly alert you. Flow meters will help reduce water waste and lower your water bill. When you don't measure the use of water, plant death could occur from overwatering.

HOME IMPROVEMENT

A Beginner's Guide to Fall Planting and Maintenance

HERE ARE SOME TIPS TO MAKE THE MOST OF THE FALL GARDENING SEASON.

Spring and summer are perhaps the busiest times of year for gardeners. However, fall also is a prime time to tend to gardens.

The tree and bare root retailer Bowler & Branch advises that soil temperatures in many regions of the country may still be warm enough to encourage root growth well into the start of winter. Furthermore, fall is often the ideal time to plant, fertilize and keep a garden going or to get a head start on next year's bounty.

Here are some tips to make the most of the fall gardening season.

PLANT FALL ANNUALS

Near the end of September, start planting cool-weather-loving pansies and violas for pops of color as summer flowers fade. Also, it's a good idea to stock up on bulbs that will bloom in the months to come before they sell out in stores. Wait until the temperatures really cool down before planting them in desired spots for spring sprouts.

SOW SALAD SEEDS

Lettuce, spinach, radishes, and arugula tolerate cooler temperatures. Try new and interesting lettuce varieties and enjoy salads well into the fall season.

TAKE INVENTORY OF THE SUN

Positioning a garden carefully means maximizing hours of sunlight, which begin to dwindle in the fall. Experts say gardens grow best in sunny locations that receive six hours of direct sunlight each day. This is where container gardens can be helpful, as they allow gardeners to move plants into spots that will get ample sunlight.

FILL LANDSCAPING GAPS

Some fall plants can add color around the landscape and brighten up homes to add curb appeal. In addition to pansies and violas, asters, kale and chrysanthemums are fall blooms. Keep in mind that mums can come back year after year. So take them out of those flower pots and get them into the ground. They can be enjoyed next year as well, sprouting in early spring and developing leaves and buds through late summer.

CLEAR UNWANTED GROWTH

Fall is an ideal time to cut back spent vegetable plants and get rid of errant weeds. Rather than bagging leaves, mow them with a grass catcher and then add the mix to a vegetable garden as an excellent soil insulator. The nitrogen and carbon will fertilize the soil, enhancing growing possibilities and limiting weed growth.

PROPAGATE PLANTS

As temperatures gradually begin to cool, start taking cuttings from perennials, gathering seed pods from azaleas and rhododendrons and dividing hardwood cuttings, says the resource Gardening Know How. Consult with a garden center or horticulturist on the proper ways to propagate stems using rooting hormone and other techniques.

KEEP WATERING

Water is essential in the fall and winter as roots can still be growing. Gradually reduce watering duration as plants go dormant. Fall planting and maintenance can extend gardening season and improve the chances of growing a healthy spring garden.

Dirt and dust accumulation is found even in the cleanest homes. In addition to everyday living, other factors can lead to an increased need for air duct cleaning:

- Pets
- Occupants with allergies or asthma
- Cigarette or cigar smoke
- Water contamination or damage to the home / HVAC system
- Home renovation or remodeling projects

Some people are more sensitive to these contaminants than others. Allergy and asthma sufferers, as well as young children and the elderly, tend to be more susceptible to the types of poor indoor air quality that air duct cleaning can help address.

PHOTOGRAPHER AND PHOTO EDITOR

Dan's Papers, the leading weekly news and lifestyle publication covering the entire East End of Long Island, is seeking a savvy photo editor to join our team. The ideal candidate is organized, comfortable working under deadline, a strong photographer, and lives in or near the Hamptons or on the North Fork.

The photo editor's biggest responsibilities will include coordinating events that need to be covered, assigning photographers, ensuring captions and write-ups match the photos, and working with graphic designers to get photos laid out in photo spreads that are a key part of the production of the weekly print publication.

We're looking for an energetic multitasking team player who's full of ideas, comfortable working independently in a fast-paced environment, and familiar with the events and people on the East End.

HIGH PROFILE

Robert Tuchman: Sag Harbor's Success Storyteller

BY TODD SHAPIRO

Whether you are a subscriber to his podcast How Success Happens or meeting Robert Tuchman for the first time, you can tell he's an innovator. While he holds many titles, ranging from published author to co-founder of Amaze Media Labs, his entrepreneurial spirit and drive are how his "success happens."

As a recent college graduate, Tuchman was an aspiring reporter. With a deep passion for sport and a Bachelor's Degree in journalism, Tuchman sought a job as a sportswriter in New York's competitive media market. He struck out in this attempt, though, struggling to find his dream job in the tough employment market that was the early 1990s. But as fate would have it, three decades later, his career has encompassed sporting events, journalism, and media — in a different way than once anticipated.

"I was fortunate at a young age to realize that life is short and blessed to live in a country that afforded me the opportunity to find a job in something I was passionate about like sports and entertainment. I went to school to be a journalist and, at the time, I couldn't find any jobs. I begrudgingly went to work at Lehman Brothers for a few months, hated it, and ended up working at a sports marketing company — one of those sweepstakes companies where larger companies would host 'win a trip' raffles for their consumers or to entertain clients," Tuchman says.

"All of the clients that we had liked the sweepstakes for their customers, but what they really wanted was the experience, to entertain their clients or provide incentives for their own high-performing employees. At that time, a company would take a client to see the Yankees and give them a hot dog. I saw the opportunity in corporate America and we became one of the first companies to white glove, more immersive and high-end experiences to attend sporting events," Tuchman continues. "We targeted companies who had budgets to entertain their clients on this level helping them build and develop relationships."

Tuchman started Tuchman Sports Enterprise, which later became TSE Sports and Entertainment. As the industry grew, the experiences being planned by Tuchman and his partner,

ROBERT TUCHMAN

Brett Sklar, grew larger and more popular. They'd incorporate celebrities, former-professional athletes, and sports stars into their once in a lifetime experiences. After some time, TSE Sports and Entertainment was placed on the INC 500 list.

Tuchman and his partner would spend nine years building the business until a private equity firm acquired the company.

After spending some time helping the PE firm acquire other businesses to grow the overall company, Tuchman and his partner transitioned themselves into a new venture: Goviva. Tuchman recognized that demand remained high in this niche of the entertainment industry, Goviva would approach entertainment with a broader scope.

"Really my partner Brett noticed a trend of companies not only looking for sporting events but for experiential opportunities in fashion, culinary, or with celebrities. We built Goviva with the same concept, and it kind of took off," says Tuchman.

Goviva grew, also landing itself on the INC 500 list. Goviva was working with Fortune 500 companies, including American Express, SAP, Capital One, Salesforce and Google. Tuchman and Sklar remained at the helm of the company until 2015, when Goviva was purchased by Creative Artists Agency (CAA). Tuchman stayed on at CAA for almost five years through the transition.

After leaving CAA, the president of Entrepreneur Magazine, Bill Shaw, approached Tuchman, with the opportunity of hosting his own podcast. Entrepreneur named Tuchman the host of "How Success Happens" where he has had in-depth interviews with many of the world's most notable entrepreneurs.

He's interviewed business leaders ranging from Alex Rodriguez to the founders of major companies like Lululemon, Shake Shack, Warby Parker, Home Depot, Square/Block, and many more, in over 150 episodes. He says it's been the best business school he could ever attend as he has learned so much.

"Audio is an incredible way to be authentic and to share stories in an empathetic way," Tuchman says.

As he hosted the podcast, he thought these business leaders should be hosting their own podcast and establishing their own forum to speak with employees, clients, and consumers.

"This was another lightbulb moment," Tuchman says. "I was interviewing people, I realized that the leaders of these companies should be creating their own branded content for themselves and their businesses," he continues.

So Tuchman started Amaze Media Labs with his longtime partner Sklar in the middle of a pandemic, a company that helps many of the businesses and brands that we interact with in everyday life create branded content. Whether it is through having their own podcast or another form of in-house media, Amaze helps companies share their stories and create their own narrative.

"Within two years, we now have over 70 clients, from Pfizer to Bet-MGM, to insurance companies, to retail stores like Michael's art supply. I've realized that everyone wants to tell their story. It's no different than back in the '90s when every company needed their own website."

"The business has grown and now we have employees all over North America. And we have created a technology to go and target people who might find a certain podcast interesting, generating listens and downloads. No one else in the industry has been able to do this yet. Our technology is the only thing I've ever seen that actually generates an audience with IAB approved downloads — I've learned for myself," Tuchman says. It's pretty incredible and it's a game changer in the podcasting industry where building an audience is the hardest thing to do no matter how good your content is. We are thinking about raising money to really build out our technology platform further.

While a native of the Upper West Side, the warm summer months bring Tuchman and his family to the East End, to enjoy the quaint and relaxed quality of life that we all enjoy. He spends most of his time with his wife and two daughters in Sag Harbor, which he fondly calls his favorite community in the Hamptons.

When asked about his favorite part of spending time here, he reverts back to his passion for sports, and his embrace of the weekend softball league that has made its home in Sag Harbor.

"My favorite thing in the entire world is playing in the Sag Harbor softball game, which I have been playing in every weekend on Saturdays and Sundays at Mashashimuet Park. The history of the game is incredible and it's been going on for decades, and there's nothing more than that," Tuchman says.

"But my wife loves the beach, so we always go to Mecox Beach, and spend a lot of our time sitting outside on the porch, staring off at the boats in the Harbor. On Fridays or Saturday nights, we will walk around in the calmness in Sag Harbor, and get ice cream. We fell in love with Sag Harbor and the 'New England' feel you get when you visit here without having to see any Patriot or Red Sox hats, Tuchman says.

The East Hampton Town Board's Litigious Wastefulness Is a National Embarrassment!

And it's pitting
the East End against each other!

“ The tony town of East Hampton has already reportedly shelled out $2.5 million-plus to battle a slew of money-draining lawsuits challenging its plan to privatize its airport—after angering just about all its residents.

New York Post, April 24, 2022

“ Justice Paul J. Baisley Jr. held East Hampton Town and the town trustees in contempt and levied a nearly $240,000 fine for violating a 2021 court decision..

Plus the plaintiff's legal fees!

East Hampton Star, July 1, 2022

With no end in sight,
When 77% of residents want the airport open
And resolutions found,
We have to ask, where does it end?
